

THE PRODIGY

He knows about philosophy, economy, theology,
He can tell the old gang how it's done,
A complex of superiority that never needs apology
'Tis hard to find his equal 'neath the Sun.

He shoots a line voluminous and plentiful,
In the papers sure he's made his bow,
Diminutive but pulchritudinous and presidential
And he "wonders who's kissing her now."

A debater of sentimental eloquence
Who excites his hearers to a row,
He keeps it up with disregard of consequence
But he "wonders who's kissing her now."

—Crawley Moses.
