Crawley Moses Criticized for Would-be Exposé in Poem!

“COON” CHALLENGES POET TO DUEL!
FEELING RUNS HIGH!

St. Dunstan's University, April 3: (Special to Red and White):

Crawley Moses, “imminent” poet and intelligentzier, when interviewed today by our representative, stated that he had nothing to say. Lighting a cheroot, and nonchalantly discarding a fish-cake which he had been thoughtfully munching in one hand, he mumbled, “There is a strong tide of feeling against me. I have been threatened with mayhem, turpitude and horseradish, but I do not flinch.”

Crawley slipped his china teeth into his pocket, where they snapped nervously for a few moments before subsiding.

He continued, “The poem which they have tried to suppress, and which has caused so much discussion was not only an outspoken array of undeniable facts—it was literature of the highest order!” Moses gulped sobbingly.

“The Title, “Old Black Joe”, was perfectly harmless, if somewhat obvious. It must have been the references to undue loafing about the dormitory and study hall, that caused the trouble.

The poet shnozzled for a moment in silence and then oscillated vigorously. He pulled his tawny wig over one eye and smiled roguishly.

“Who knows?” he said, “If I published the poem, I might be able to “train ’er” to take him in after the show, and if that happened, could he have feelings other than gratitude? Well, let him do his worst. He may take his suit to the Supreme Court of Brazil if he likes”

Speaking of suits you should see the excellent line of ultra-modern models now on sale for $37.50 at
