

and we have no lamps to guide us. We can but wish him success in his chosen sphere and bid him a fond adieu as he goes forth to join the Alumni of St. Dunstan's.

LEO A. DOYLE

Where the wind of Orwell and Pownal Bays sweeps over the beautiful slopes of Earnscliffe, there, Leo A. Doyle was born, and he spent his boyhood days in these peaceful surroundings. He attended the district school, and in 1917 he entered P. W. C.; he obtained a teacher's license in 1918, and taught in his home school during the following year; in 1919 he entered St. Dunstan's. It is of his life in St. Dunstan's that we know most. Leo has shown himself to be a brilliant student, and as to his popularity it is enough to say that he has been chosen valedictorian by his class. Leo is an excellent friend. His temperament is a perfect blending of all the qualities that go to make a Christian gentleman. He hates sham and is always an advocate of fair play. Leo's sympathy is broad enough to embrace all humanity, and he believes that kindness does more good than strictness.

We do not know what path Leo will follow in life, but we feel sure that he will choose rightly.

HERBERT NICHOLAS MURPHY

To Panmure, nestled on the tranquil waters of Three Rivers, belongs the honor of being the birthplace of this member of the graduating class of '23. Herb, as he is familiarly known, received his early education at Panmure school; successfully passing the Matriculation Examinations, he becoming desirous of more knowledge, came to St. Dunstan's. At the University he by his even temperament his frank and genial nature, won the esteem of all; room '23 was the regular rendezvous for all the students of Dalton Hall.

In athletics, Herb's true nature shone. Not only on the gridiron, but also on the diamond, did his ability win him honours. Many an opponent encountering him in the scrim took occasion to keep his safe distance in future.

Herb won his spurs in many a hardfought game, and more than once was the means of bringing the laurels home to Old St Dunstan's

In Mock Parliament he also took a prominent part. Under the McTague administration he held the position of Postmaster-general, and probably because of his experience in this work, he discharged his duties successfully. According to our last College "Gazette," he showed his consideration for his employees by granting each official a holiday from their arduous tasks.

Herb's many friends will greatly miss him when he has said "Good-bye" to the University, but all join in wishing him success in whatever course he may pursue.

CHARLES McCARTHY

The beautiful little town of Souris has the distinction of being the birthplace of this modest and popular member of the graduating class of 1923. After completing his studies in the high school of his native town he entered St. Dunstan's in the fall of 1918 where, by his strict adherence to duty, he won the esteem of all.

In the sphere of athletics he won no small distinction. As a member of the first team of football, he showed his prowess as an athlete; as a "forward wing" on that team, he fought many a hard fight where his presence of mind and quickness of action often gave the Saints an impetus to victory. But his athletic activities were not confined to football alone, as his occasional pugilistic encounters have testified. Not only, however, on the gridiron, but also in a special manner on the floor of the House of Commons did he exhibit his competence. As Minister of Public Works under the Trainor Administration, he was particularly active, manifesting the confidence placed in him by his electors by ably placing before the House many advantages that would ensue from the building of bridges through Eastern King's in order to shorten circuitous routes.

Charlie was not only popular with his own classmates, but also with the members of the junior year; his room was a frequent rendezvous for all.

This year he goes forth from his Alma Mater well equipped to meet whatever the future may bring. His kind personality and natural ability will ensure him success in life, which is the heartfelt wish of all

WILLIAM J. O'LEARY

Montreal, P. Q., was the home and birth-place of this member of the graduating class. On completing his early education at St. Patrick's school, he entered the college of St. Laurent near that city. He attended there for three years, a period marked with every success. When the course for English students was discontinued, in nineteen-twenty, he came to St. Dunstan's; from that time on, he has been a noted figure among us, distinguishing himself time and again in his studies, in debate, and in the Mock Parliament of the college. Many an opponent of no mean reputation, aspiring to great heights, in the Commons, has been beaten down under his scathing counter-attacks. The Red and White of the past two years has been grateful to him for his many literary donations to its pages, and to him as editor-in-chief is due the success of this year's editions.

His attainments in the scholastic arena, his distinctions as a speaker, and his eminence as a journalist have not been the only reasons, however, for the popularity that he has enjoyed among the students, his own personality, evenness of disposition, and readiness to help others have made him a friend to all; and as he leaves, we who remain wish that the future will rain on him all and more of the good fortune of the past.

BERNARD MURPHY

This member of the graduating class was born in the village of Freetown, and at an early age moved to Emerald. He early exhibited those qualities of mind which have so distinguished him in his studies during his college course.

Bernard belongs to that rare class of men who makes a success both of studies and athletics. In his studies he ranks among the highest in his class. And as an athlete he takes his place among the best. Although a good all round man, he distinguished himself particularly in football, and in the college diary is a note to the effect, that never has a man had the privilege of crossing the St. Dunstan's goal-line on Bernard's side of the half-line.

There are some men who are naturally reserved, who go through this life seeking neither aid in climbing the ladder of success, nor praise when they stand on the top-most rung; such a man is Bernard. He possesses those two qualities that stand out above all other which are so essential to success: ambition and determination; the one causes a man to look to great things in this life, and the other keeps him from turning aside when difficulties cross his path on the way to the desired goal. We cannot say what Bernard intends to do in the future; perhaps when a few years roll by we will find that his name is associated with some of the great scientific discoveries of the day, or, better still, that he is leading that higher and greater life of single blessedness. We wish him success in his future calling, hoping that fortune will ever smile upon him who so "assiduously waits upon her"; and we bid him a fond good-bye.

RALPH MALONE

To the graduating class of this year the parish of Lot "65" has not failed to make its contribution in the person of Ralph Malone. The parish records show that Ralph was born in the year 1904, though already he makes his exit from the portals of St. Dunstan's as a graduate. He received his primary education in his district school, where he showed an early aptitude for study. At an early age, he passed the entrance examinations to Prince of Wales College; but he sought a deeper fountain of knowledge and therefore came to St. Dunstan's in the autumn of 1918. Here he has pursued a most successful course. His attainment of the coveted degree of B. L. bears silent testimony to this rare ability as a student. He has not confined his endeavors to the class-room alone; but in every sphere of college activities, whether it be in parliamentary debate or on the baseball diamond, he has participated. During his college course, Ralph has shown himself to be of a quiet and retiring disposition and has acquired the general affection of the students. As to the possible course of life he will pursue, we dare not conjecture. We feel assured, nevertheless, that whatever pathway he may choose to tread, if success in the college studies be any criterion of the future, the bright hopes are not unfounded with which we usher this promising young graduate from the peace and quiet of St. Dunstan's into the struggle and turmoil of the world.

ANDRE ALBERT DesROSIERS

The subject of this sketch, the only French Canadian member of the graduating class, was born, in Sainte Luce, P. Q., in 1902. He received his early education in his home convent, and, at the age of fourteen, entered the University of Rimouski. Here he remained for five years, and, at the end of that time, completed his classical course and obtained the B. L. Degree.

He next entered the S^{em}inaire de Philosophie at Montreal. Here, he was forced to discontinue his studies in Philosophy because of ill-health. Desirous, however, of completing his college course, he disregarded medical advice to refrain from studies, and came last November to St. Dunstan's.

During the short time that he has been with us, he has so endeared himself to the student body as to make us regret the shortness of his stay. The graduates pride themselves on having him as a member of their class. Albert is a true friend and the possessor of a free and open nature, a true sense of joviality, kind and pleasant manners, which make him a pleasing and entertaining companion.

He is a remarkably talented and energetic student, and because of his natural abilities, he has greatly progressed in his classwork, although handicapped by a yet insufficient knowledge of English. He was an enthusiastic member of Mock Parliament. His speech in the House impressed us with the fact that he possesses the gift of oratory.

He also shines as an electioneer, and his love for that art led him to direct the French concert, for whose success he was responsible. Albert also courts the Muse, and Red and White is grateful to him for his donations.

We are unable to state definitely what he intends to do in the future, but we feel sure that the qualities that made him so amiable to us will lead him in the way of success, and we can safely predict a brilliant future for him in whatever his life-work may be.

JAMES B. McTAGUE

"An indomitable will,
A courage never to forget or yield."

Though to some it may seem rather strange that we should, in the description of one of our graduates, make use of the words with which Milton described our arch enemy, Satan, yet they are the only ones that seem fitting for B. McTague. Nor is there any necessity for making an apology for thus describing him; for there are often found persons, who, though by no means satanic, nevertheless possess numerous like qualities.

The register tells us that this graduate was born at Iona, where he spent his youthful days, amid verdant fields, companioned by the singing birds and blossoming roses. He entered Prince of Wales College while still young, and easily succeeded in getting a teacher's license. He had hardly launched forth on his pedagogical career, when the call came for men to fight for King and Country. Bidding adieu to his friends, Barney enlisted in 1916, and spent the following two years in France.

When the war ended, however, he came to St. Dunstan's where, for the past four years he has shown himself to be a student of an uncommon promise.

If the space would permit, and Barney were subject to flattery, we could write page after page relative to his activities in his chosen "Alma Mater", but such is not the case. Suffice to say, that besides being a good student, he was a hero on the gridiron, no mean hockeyist, and a pitcher feared for his cunning and revered for his prowess. He also had the honourable and enviable position of President of S. D. U. A. A. A. In parliament, too, as a Leader of the Opposition, his eloquence often left us open-mouthed and staring. His ability, however, in these lines, has not swelled him with pride, but served rather to enhance his popularity.

There is little more to say, except that, although we do not know what God has ahead for him, we wish him every success. When he goes forth, let him always remember that his name will ever be cherished by us as though it were written in golden letters on the tableau of Old St. Dunstan's.

JOSEPH BASIL CROKEN

In September, 1912, when St. Dunstan's College opened after the summer vacation, there came within its walls a young and sturdy lad of shy disposition, who was destined, after a broken college course, to become one of the most esteemed members of the graduating class of 1923.

J. Basil Croken, about whom this sketch is written, on entering St. Dunstan's enrolled with a number of others in what was to be the graduating class of 1917; and, like all of these, excepting one, he left that class before graduation. During the college year of 1913-14 we find him at his old home among the green fields of Clermont, and in the autumn of 1914 he returned to St. Dunstan's to renew his studies. But on account of the scarcity of farm help during time of war he was forced to return to the plough, and it was not until 1919 that he returned to complete his course here.

In every phase of college life he has always taken a prominent place. As a student he was always diligent and desirous of acquiring more knowledge. But he never desired to specialize in any one branch to the detriment of the others, but, rather to gain an extended knowledge in all subjects. He could not, however, be considered a "book worm," but always found time to devote himself to athletics. For the past four years he has been a prominent figure on the grid-iron and during the last three seasons one of the stalwart forwards of our senior football team, and his opponents considered him a dangerous man to have his hands on the ball. In hockey, although he never aspired to the ranks of senior players, yet his class-mates always found him a valued member of their team and for this reason they elected him captain of the Senior Philosopher's hockey team.

Not only is he valued in his class as a student and an athlete, but much more as a friend. Those who have had the privilege of being intimately acquainted with him have always found him an agreeable companion, and a true and faithful friend.

Although there are many opinions, yet no one is able to ascertain what course he intends to follow. However, they all hold this one opinion; that whatever course he may choose to pursue, he will bring credit to St. Dunstan's and honor to the class of '23.

St. C. T. '23.

CHARLES ST. CLAIR TRAINOR

Albany, P. E. I., the place of his birth, has every reason to be proud of this popular graduate. His five years at St. Dunstan's have been characterized by a steadfast determination to achieve success in his work, and this, added to much natural ability, secured for him a high place on the honor lists for proficiency in his studies.

His zeal for intellectual perfection, however, did not prevent him from taking an active part in all affairs connected with college life. The various societies found in him an enthusiastic supporter and promotor and very often he has been entrusted with positions of responsibility.

In the debating hall he stood second to none, and his splendid arguments in the ponderous questions which came up for debate are worthy of note. During the past winter, as Premier in Mock Parliament, he won new laurels, distinguishing himself as an able politician and an orator of no mean ability.

He has always taken an active part in athletics, especially in football, being for the past three years one of the star forwards of the senior team. Last fall, as an emblem of his true worth as a player, he was elected captain, and to him must be attributed, in a large measure, the phenomenal success of the team. Although not playing senior baseball or hockey he was always a valued member of his class team. In hockey he shone as one of the impenetrable defence for the renowned "Mohawks."

Always loyal to his class and solicitous to uphold time honored customs, every movement which tended to contribute to the historic legendary of old St. Dunstan's met with his approval and whole hearted support. As a proof of this we may mention that he was organizer and commander-in-chief of the "Last Charge" of the famous "Bucket Brigade," which rendered such efficient service on the night of the sixth of March.

For the past year he has been business manager of Red and White," a position which he filled with profit to the magazine and credit to himself.

In regard to his future life, even his most intimate friends are in darkness. However, no matter what profession he may follow, we feel assured that he will be true to his standards of truth and uprightness, and will earn for himself a reputation as one of St. Dunstan's most illustrious men.

J. B. C. '23

PATRICK L. ROONEY

In the spring of 1901, Iona with its ancient and historic name, became the birthplace of this most popular member of our graduating class. From here, while in his infancy, he moved with his parents to the near-by district known as Cherry Valley.

Here it was that he received his early education. Here it was that the foundation was laid for the science which he has since acquired. But a person of "Pat's" abilities soon finds out that in our public schools his desire for learning cannot be satiated. He longed for some fountain of knowledge wherein he might drink more deeply. These were the feelings which filled his breast when he entered St. Dunstan's in 1917. Since then he has climbed up the ladder, step by step, year by year, till now, having finished his course, he goes forth from the doors of his Alma Mater well armed to fight bravely the battles of life.

There is yet another phase of his college career. A poor man, indeed, would he be who would devote all his time to his intellectual and moral development, and totally neglect the physical. Far different was the case with "Pat". We see him take part in every line of athletics: the leading half-back on our senior football team; a player second to none on our handball alley; a base-ball pitcher of no mean repute; and many a time did he tend goal for the old "Mohawks," and by his marvellous stopping saved them from going down to a disgraceful defeat.

During the time which "Pat" spent at St. Dunstan's he secured a firm hold on the affections of all who knew him. His upright character and jocund disposition served to make him a very popular student. On the campus he was fair and square to all, and often was his room the scene of a very enjoyable "smoker" spent in harmless amusement.

All that is left for us to do now, as a loyal son of S. D. U. embarks upon the sea of life amid the best wishes of all, is to bid him a fond farewell.

THEODORE THOMAS MONAGHAN

The subject of this sketch has the honor of being the youngest graduate in the class of '23. He was born in the quiet seclusion of Kelly's Cross early in June, 1904, but his guardian star had not destined him for country life, so, while he was yet a child, he removed with his parents to Charlottetown, where he received his early education at Queen Square School.

At the age of fourteen he passed the Matriculation Examinations, and in the following fall, eager to increase his knowledge, he enrolled among the students at St. Dunstan's.

In the five years spent at the College, Theodore has won the respect and esteem of his class-mates, and everyone will feel that he has lost a friend when he is gone.

On the second Football team, which last year defended the Intermediate Championship of the Island, he played an important part, as his opponents will be forced to admit. Nor were his athletics confined to this branch of sport only, for, on Philosophers Day he was the steady right wing for the seniors, and it was mainly due to his rushing tactics that they defeated the Junior aggregation in one of the hardest fought games of hockey, played in the College ring.

We do not know what his future work will be, but we are confident that whatever walk of life he may traverse he will bring honor and credit not only to his class, but also to his Alma Mater, who now, with motherly affection bids him a fond "Au-revoir."

J. H. F. '25

WILLIAM LEO SULLIVAN

In a peaceful little district of Greenfield, P. E. I. was born, during the latter part of the nineteenth century, William Leo Sullivan, but in early youth he moved with his parents to Cardigan. Here he attended the village school and later took up telegraphy which he pursued with success for a number of years. His great ambition, however, was to obtain a college education, and with that end in view we find him in the autumn of 1917 enrolled as a student of St. Dunstan's University. Since his arrival amongst us, Leo, by his steady habits, his honest and upright character, has proved himself a worthy successor to the many sons of Cardigan who in the past have attended our noble institution of learning.

Possessing no mean athletic ability, he is a member of our senior football squad who this year won the Campbell trophy, nor was this the only line in which he has won fame, for it was due to his coaching that the Senior hockey team defeated the heretofore invincible juniors.

As Secretary for the St. Dunstan's Dramatic Society, he directed the destinies of that body in a manner worthy our greatest financiers. The success of the presentation of Richelieu is due in a great measure to his directorial ability. Not must we omit his parliamentary career. His noble and eloquent defense of the Trainor administration during the 1923 session will go down in the history of St. Dunstan's University, as one of the greatest in the annals of Mock Parliament. Of his future life we know nothing. Suffice it to say that wherever he may go or whatever profession he may adopt, he will bring honor, not only to himself and his class, but also to his Alma Mater from under whose sheltering guidance he now departs.
