JOHN HOWARD MULLALLY

About the beginning of the twentieth century, the Lord, thinking that Souris was in need of another eminent man, deemed it expedient to lift the veil, and to bring to light the subject of this biography. John was born at Souris West; his early education was begun at Gowan Brae School, and completed at Souris High School under the direction of the village pedagogues with whom John was always a favorite. He successfully passed the Matriculation Examinations, and desirous of imbibing more deeply of the fount of knowing he enrolled as a student of St. Dunstan's.

During the five years at the University, John by his humor and genial manner made firm friends with all, and was most popular with his class mates.

John's athletic ability was confined almost wholly to the "track," and by his daily training during the fall months—winning distinction by his sensational "dashes" from the Campus to Dalton Hall—he succeeded so well as to be a chosen member of the graduating class relay-team.

In Mock Parliament John was particularly sharp and prudent, on some occasions accepting the position of Speaker so as to escape the searching questions of the Opposition. We cannot presume to say what profession he will follow, yet judging by the energy displayed in college activities, he will surely meet with success, and be a credit to his Alma Mater.

LEONARD FARMER

In the year 1903 a smiling, dimpled babe, whom we now know as Leonard Farmer, made his debut on the stage of life. He may truly be said the son of a Farmer. The place which was the scene of that play was that quiet, peaceful hamlet of Kinkora, nestled along the banks of the famous Dunk

In early life we find "Len" a leader in acquiring knowledge from the font of Kinkora School. He steadily climbed up the ladder of success, passing the P. W. C. Exams, at the early age of fourteen. Thus far advanced, he realized the importance of higher education, and so entered St. Dunstan's in 1918. Since then he has made himself a friend to all, Philosopher and Freshman. It is certainly no mean boast when we say that "Len" is one of the most popular graduates this year. In study and pursuit of knowledge he has always been one of the leading members of his class; and many a time did he use this knowledge to good advantage, especially in debating, where many noble opponents fell before his eloquence and reasoning.

Len was a strong adherent of the maxim, that all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, and so we see him take an active part in athletics. During the past winter he displayed his skill in hockey as a forward on the "snappy" Mohawk team. To show the esteem in which he was held at St. Dunstan's, we have only to look at the fact of his holding the responsible position of Secretary of the S. D. U. A. A. during the past year, in addition to being one of the business managers of the Red and White. His course at St. Dunstan's is now finished, and, as he goes, forth from the doors of his Alma Mater, amid the best wishes of all, we bid him a fond farewell.

HENRY JOSEPH DOIRON

The graduating class which goes forth this year from the walls of old St. Dunstan's, would not have been complete if this member were not present. It is, therefore, with great temerity that we attempt his biography; for the honor of giving a true and complete picture of his life, as it is familiarly known to us, is a task for one of no mean literary ability.

According to records, Henry was born in the early part of the twentieth century in the quiet little village of Rusticoville, where he received his primary education, but having a greater thirst for knowledge, he eagerly sought its flowery font, and was induced to enter St. Dunstan's in the autumn of 1918.

Here Henry has shown his abilities as a student. He always ranked among the highest in his class. It is not enough to say that he made a wonderful course, but by his genial disposition he won a host of friends, and in departing will be missed by both faculty and students. During his five years at St. Dunstan's he has rendered valuable services as a member of the choir, and has shown us that he is endowed with extraordinary musical talent. Although not a participator in athletics, he nevertheless took a keen interest in them and was ever present to cheer "The Saints" on to victory.

As to his future career, we are not certain, but it is generally understood that he intends to take up the study of Theology. Of this, no doubt, he will make a success, and he is a man of whom his Alma Mater in later years will always be proud. At parting we sincerely wish him happiness in his chosen career. "Au revoir."

DIONEL BUOTE

This popular graduate hails from the parish of St. Augustine, Rustico, where he was born on September 17th, 1902. At an early age he began his studies in St. Andrews School, where, by his diligence, he won admiration of his teacher and classmates. In a comparatively short time, he finished his primary education and in the fall of 1918, he enrolled himself among the Saints.

Here, as at St. Andrews, Dionel has distinguished himself by his acute understanding and steady education. He has earned the name of philosopher in every sense of the word, and is a true supporter of the doctrines of St. Thomas.

He is of a quiet, retiring nature, always smiling, always cheerful, in short, a good fellow—What can we say more?

As to his plans for the future he is silent. Someone has whispered, however, that he intends to enter a seminary and while we wish him success, we need only hope that he continues the good work he has done in Old St. Dunstan's, and success will be inevitable.

PETER JOSEPH WALSH

Among the beautiful hills of the quiet little villiage of St. Annes, Peter Joseph Walsh was born at the dawn of the twentieth Century. We know little of his early life, save that he attended the district school, and after the usual course of Studies, matriculated to Prince of Wales College, where he obtained a teacher's license, and after teaching a few years he entered St. Dunstan's University. Four years have now passed since Peter entered St. Dunstan's during which time he has shown himself to be a good student, an exceptional athlete, and a friend worth having. Football is Peter's favorite game; for the last three years he has played side quarter for the Senior team and by his courage and ability proved himself to be one of the best players who has ever had the privilege of battling for St. Dunstan's on the gridiron. He is also a hockey player of no mean ability, and was the Senior's star Centre on Philosopher's day.

But studies and Athletics have not made Pete neglect the social side of life, though he is of a quiet and serious disposition; he can, when occasions requires, throw aside this serious exterior and be the jolliest one of a jolly crowd. With the students in general, Pete is very popular, and his own classmates have given him an outward show of the esteem in which they hold him by electing him President of their class.

We now come to a point where we must pause, for concerning what he intends doing in the future Pete is silent,
