

by both. Both gentlemen are graduates, Mr. McDonald graduated in '13 with a degree of B. Sc. and Mr. McPhee with the class of '14 receiving a degree of Bachelor of Arts. Mr. McDonald had practiced two years before their association. He is married and District Deputy of the Knights of Columbus. Mr. McPhee taught for a year at the college here and is kindly remembered especially by the present graduating class. He is also a member of the Knights of Columbus.

On Sunday June 4, J. J. Butler and H. A. Duff, both former students will be ordained to the priesthood by his Lordship Bishop O'Leary.

The Funny Man

Reg.—“What is the greatest triumph in the surgical art?”

Roy—“To take the jaw out of a woman.”

Pineau—“Did the Prefect miss you when you were in town?”

Buote—“No but he missed me this morning.”

Pineau—“How's that?”

Buote—“His aim isn't very straight.”

Greg.—“Can you pay that little bill of mine today?”

Bones—“Go 'way, I can't even pay my own little bills”

Ches.—“Did you hear about Tidy's being arrested.”

Tommy—“No. What did he do?”

Ches.—“He was breaking into a song and only got through two bars.”

McT-g-e—“So you asked him for his daughter, eh? How did you come out?”

Walsh—“Through the window,”

Merlin—"That dog can track my steps from town every night."

Bullacre—"Why don't you take a bath and fool him."

Malone—"I tried to pull one over on Morriset this morning."

Sage—"And what did he say?"

Malone—"He said to try some other simp."

Sage—"What did you do then?"

Malone—"Then I came to you."

Fido—"How do you spell mule?"

Osborne—"M-le."

Fido—"That isn't right, you left something out."

Osborne—"Yes, I left "you" out.

Connolly—"I heard you were held up the other night."

Rowe—"Well it was an act of charity. I couldn't hold myself."

Snid—"Did you see me sweeping fourth corridor last night"

Mac.—"Yes, your head makes a nice broom."

M-C-rm-c—"Did you ever catch many flirting?"

Tar—"Yes, that's the way I caught Margie."

Rich.—"I just got out on time last Thursday."

Miss H-g-es.—"What would have happened if you had been late?"

Rich.—"I wouldn't have got in today."

Miss H.—"I wish you had been late."

Rennie—"Have you read Lamb's Tales, Lummo?"

Lummo—"Talk sense, friend, Lambs have no red tails."

McAvinn—"Why do you laugh at the news of a death?"

Vince M-r-hy—"My dear friend, I'm an undertaker."

McIvor—"May I go to town this afternoon?"

Prefect—"What do you want to go to town for?"

McIvor—"I lost my appetite."

Prefect—"Where do you expect to find it?"

McIvor—"At the Eldon Hotel."

AMONG THE AUTHORS

"Pretty Mack" or "The Short Window Blind," by Herb Murphy.

"The Crack of The Bat," by B. McTague.

"The President's Cousin," by Aub. Farmer.

"The Undertaker's Daughter," by Vincent Murphy.

"Escaping the Clutches of Buffalo Bill," by Pete Walsh.

"A Seige With Polar Bears," by Leo Mallette.

"Color Blind," by Ronahan and Keefe.

"The Wandering Musician," by H. Donalds.

SEVEN WONDERS OF THE UNIVERSITY

Heat in the Dalton Hall

Bill O'Leary stealing second base.

Caribou skipping supper.

Tanlac's Battery.

Pete Sullivan without tobacco.

Louie Dougan sleeping over.

Greg. Gallant hitting a home run.

THE LATEST SONG HITS

"Sweet Pauline," by L. McMillan.

"Margie," by Tar.

"Mustard my own," by Alf Monaghan.

"It's all Wright with me," by Brinsley.

"Papa's in town," by L. Farmer.

"Lovely Rita, by H. McLellan.

"Marion, why ain't you marryin'," by J. Cameron.

O FEET, THOU ART WITH ME!

Only an acre of leather

Laced with ten furlongs of rope

Shuffling through the Dalton Hall;

No wonder the floors are broke.

One after another they're lifted,