

WHAT IS YOUR OPINION — ON ONE UNIVERSITY FOR P. E. I.?

STUDENTS AT S.D.U. FAVOUR A U.P.E.I.

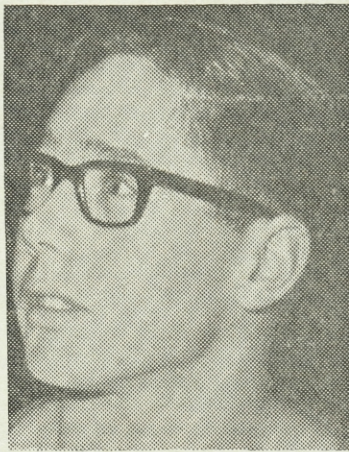

CHARLEY McMILLAN

P.W.C.'s latest announcement of "unqualified separatism", which was implicit in all public statements and quite obvious in its Royal Commission brief, has betrayed the spirit needed for a joint effort toward one university. It points out the urgent need for something more than the status quo. The immediate question is not one university so much as a need for common trust in a common cause. To this question, Alex Campbell holds the key, thanks to recent Ottawa conference.

RON HICKEY

The Government of Prince Edward Island definitely cannot finance two separate universities. I can see a tremendous improvement in university standards for the Island, even on the level of debating, athletics and drama, for example. This would enhance the province and would give a big boost to the ecumenical spirit on P.E.I.

Students Unimpressed by P.C. Convention

WATERLOO (CUP) — University of Waterloo students at ending the Ontario Progressive Conservative convention in Toronto last week, returned with mixed feelings.

The 18 political science students, required to submit a report of the trip to first year political science professor Donald Gordon, expressed deep concern over the lack of time and interest devoted to serious policy discussion.

The students, aware of the leadership fight between national party president, Dalton Camp, and Conservative leader, John Diefenbaker, said they thought the issue should have been included on the meeting agenda.

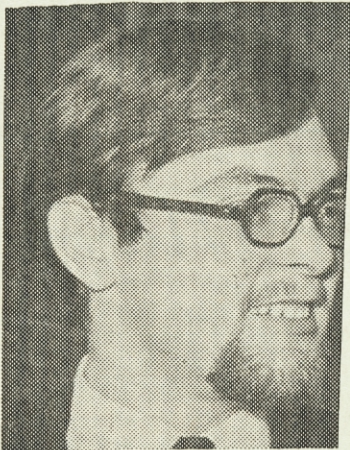

Although some students commented favorably on the convention, others denounced delegates for heavy drinking and failure to express their true feelings on the convention floor.

Said one student: "I feel anything accomplished at the provincial Conservative convention was accomplished in spite of it and not because of it."

"All the delegates did was come and say hello to their favorite cabinet ministers, have a few drinks and go home," another said.

KEN HODGE

I favour the federation of Prince of Wales College and St. Dunstan's University, with both Colleges retaining their identity within one university. This would provide both a uniformity of standards and a competitive spirit between the two existing institutions. It would also preserve the traditions of both.

NICK WONG

We can't afford two universities. It's as simple as that. Unnecessary duplication of facilities and resources is ridiculous.

MARY MacINNIS

If only to improve the quality of professors and facilities, there should be one university. This is the only way that P.E.I. will ever have a university with national significance.

DAISY DONAHUE

I favour one university for the province. Amalgamation? Federation? I'm not sure. But by a joint association, a better campus, better facilities, a larger faculty and the consequent higher standards, a larger variety and greater depth of courses could be offered to Island and visiting students.
