LEONARD JAMES CONNOLLY

No greater mortals live than manly men

In the fall of 1934 Leonard Connolly was first introduced to St. Dunstan's, a cheerful, carefree youth of eighteen. Since that time, being a diligent student, he has built nobly on the first principles which he acquired at his home and the school in Morell Rear.

In athletics, which he properly considered of secondary importance, he has reached a high standard. An outstanding member of the intercollegiate football and hockey teams for the last two years, as well as a very successful participant in other lines of sport, he will be sorely missed by team-mates and lovers of athletics at St. Dunstan's.

Able and willing to work for the benefit of all, he was often entrusted with the cares of office in college organizations, having been on the executive of S. D. U. A. A. A. for three years, also President of the Students Council and of the Senior Class this year.

Whatever may be his role in the great drama, Life, we rest assured that he shall play it as befits a man of Christian principles, spurred on by the courage of his convictions.

On this his departure from college life our best wishes go out to him and by way of advice we merely say—"Remain yourself, Leonard, and true success will be yours."

JOHN WILLIAM COYLE

"Like a comet in the sky, he outshines his fellow mortals."

Jack was born in Charlottetown, a little over nineteen years ago. He received his early education at Queen Square School and P. W. C. After attending the college in the city for two years, he came to St. Dunstan's as a freshman. He has followed the classical course here and has successfully received his "arts degree". Jack realized that a sound mind must also be accompanied by a sound body, so his activities have not been restricted to the realm of books alone. He took part in all sports and has left behind him a record worthy of praise. Because of his wholesome friendliness and quick smile he has made many friends who will be sorry to see him go. We will lose a good student and a great companion in Jack, but our loss will be the world's gain. So long, Jack, and may your worldly advancement be great.

ROLAND DESCHAMPS

*"A man he seems of cheerful yesterdays
And confident tomorrows."*—Wordsworth.

Roland was born at Gran'mère, Quebec, in the year 1919. After having received an elementary and High School education in that city, he continued in the pursuit of knowledge at Trois-Rivières. There he remained until the second semester of Junior Arts. It was in January 1939 that he enrolled at St. Dunstan's to perfect his English and to complete a course so well begun.

He is very fortunate in possessing a pleasing disposition and a rare congeniality which enable him to be serious or gay as the situation may demand. It is little wonder, then, that during his short stay with us, he has drawn to himself a large number of friends.

His attainment of the degree is proof that he has carried into his studies the same zeal and enthusiasm which characterize all his actions.

He has not, however, limited his efforts to the academic sphere. Overflowing energy and superabundant vitality must have an outlet and Roland's found it in recreational activities of various kinds. Hockey has been his favorite game, and by virtue of his good playing, he emerged this year as one of the leading scorers in the inter-class league.

Now he goes forth to seek further knowledge. Endowed as he is with natural ability, success will surely be his. So long Roland, and keep smiling.

ALBERT DUPONT

"La bonne humeur est le plus grand charme de la vie".

In 1919, when the cannons of the Great War had ceased to roar and peace had been established, a deep bass cry was heard in the city of Shawinigan Falls, Quebec: Albert Dupont had made his first appearance in this world. Albert grew up and learned the three r's in his district school. At the age of twelve, he went to Three Rivers' College where he completed his first year in Philosophy. His desire to learn the English language while finishing his classical course led him to St. Dunstan's.

During his short stay with us, Albert has proved himself a devoted and brilliant student, as well as a true gentle man at all times. His company was enjoyed by the whole student body, and with his broad smile he kept cheery everybody he met. Albert is quite at home on a pair of skates; he is also a very good tennis player. He possesses a rich bass voice which he has successfully cultivated during the year.

And now, Albert you are leaving us; au revoir. We were glad to have you with us this year and we regret your departure. We hope that success will crown any work you may undertake. May God bless you.

THOMAS VINCENT HOLLAND

"High erected thoughts seated in a heart of courtesy."

In the course of our few years of life we have experienced, from time to time, the fact that some people attract us the first time we meet them. Many times this impression does not last; in some few cases it grows with each meeting.

Tom Holland is one of the few possessing this quality for continued association with him serves only to increase the pleasure of his acquaintance. He is a gentleman and a true friend.

Born at Elmira in January, 1919, Tom attained his early education in the schools of Elmira and Souris. In 1934 he came to St. Dunstan's where he has remained to take his B. A. degree.

During his six years stay at this institution we have had many proofs of his versatility. In his studies he has been among the leaders in his class, notwithstanding his interest in most every other college activity. He has held office in the different debating societies. Red and White has also profited by his valuable services, and this year he achieved the climax in his journalistic career, having been appointed Editor-in-Chief of that important college organ.

In sporting circles around St. Dunstan's Tom is known for his enthusiastic support of every team, but this is not all. He is one of the brighter stars in the softball field and on the handball alleys, and has earned a sort of immortality as the goal keeper for the famous Third Corridor Intra-mural hockey team. The confidence of the students in his ability and in his love of sport was evidenced last year when they appointed him Secretary-Treasurer of the Athletic Association, and Manager of the Senior football and hockey teams.

One would think that all this would round out the career of any student, but not our Mr. Holland. He reclines his frame on the nearest bed and invites a philosophical or a sociological argument, and if you are foolish enough to accept the invitation, you find him making use of your logic as a subject for the exercise of his satirical wit; a situation which is bound to strain the nerves of the most avowed stoic. In the end you find yourself bowing assent, though most unwillingly to the conclusive force of his terrible logic.

But now comes the time to close. This institution is parting with a valued member to whom we must bid farewell. It must be so. May all success and happiness be yours Tom. You have our very best wishes for a full and fruitful life.

HAROLD LANDRY

"He quibbled when a quibbler came his way Yet reason over quibbling held its sway"

Having for his motto Excelsior, Harold Landry, after completing Grade X work at his school in Montague entered the High School at St. Dunstan's. Of a serious disposition for a young man of seventeen, he took from the first, advantage of every opportunity to obtain for himself an all-around education.

Knowing the value of athletics, he ardently entered this field of activity where his prowess is well known and respected. He was at his best in hockey, but he also proved his worth in all other college sports.

Societies, religious, literary, and musical, all had him for a member and frequently a leader. He is President of the C. C. S. M. C. this year and business manager of the Red and White for the last two years.

We do not know what awaits Harold in his new life, but, judging by his record here for the last six years, we safely say that he will ever be a credit to St. Dunstan's.

Au Revoir, Harold, and may true success attend you.

JOSEPH WILLIAM MAHER

*"In arguing, too, the parson owed his skill,
For e'en though vanquished he could argue still."*

Joe was born in the town of Frampton, Quebec, where he received his early education. Since he was quite a young lad when he first enrolled in the High School at St. Dunstan's, it was probably not for knowledge on his part that brought him so far from home; but as the appetite grows while eating, so Joe's desire for knowledge has increased as his education advanced. Since his studies always came first with Joe, his successful completion of his course is a merited reward for the time well spent.

He has given to extra-curricular activities their due need of attention, and has capably filled various executive positions, notably that of President of the Athletic Association. Except in hand-ball, where he really excels, having been on the championship team for five consecutive years, Joe has not been an outstanding athletic. Yet he participates in all intremural sports and plays for the sheer fun of playing.

Joe will be missed at St. Dunstan's. His popularity is not that of a campus hero, but rather the more lasting popularity of a true gentleman. As he enters new fields of endeavour a well developed character and an intellect trained in the art of thinking will, we feel sure, win for him the success he deserves. Good-bye, Joe, and God speed.

P. G. M., '41

JEAN ROBERT MARCOTTE

Venit, vidit, vicit.

If you should see a student strolling around the campus, one tall, dark, and handsome, carrying a few books under his arm and sporting a sly smile that defies analysis, ten to one it's Jean. He is probably thinking alternately of that tough Metaphysics exam he is to take tomorrow and of that latest joke he perpetrated on his roomie.

He came to us in Junior after preparatory study at Trois Rivières, Quebec. In the short two years he has spent with us we have come to prize highly his ready wit, affable nature, and hearty coöperation in student movements. Always prominent in campus activities, his last position was that of editor of the Section Francaise in the current year's Red and White.

He saw his opportunities and, in his quiet, unassuming way, made the best of them. Jean is not, however, the type that buries himself in work to the exclusion of all else. On the contrary his versatility is best manifest in some of his likes and dislikes. Likes: languages, swimming, camping, bridge, good music and a nice floor. Dislikes: radicals, hypocrisy, early rising, and too much hot sun.

He conquered a too reticent nature that marked him out when he first came to St. Dunstan's. Conquered, too, is the heart of many a pulchritudinous lass of Charlotte-town.

We understand he is going into Dentistry and we predict that this field of endeavour will be another conquest for our Jean. Good luck, Jean, and lots of it.

JAMES ALLAN McCARTHY

"A candid censor and a friend severe"

Jimmy was born in St. John, New Brunswick, on March 10, 1918. He began his scholastic career there and later moved to Amherst where he completed high school. After his graduation he worked for a year, but his thirst for knowledge was far from being quenched as yet, so the fall of '37 saw him enrolled at St. Dunstan's for the purpose of completing his arts course.

During his stay at St. Dunstan's Jim was a popular and successful student having a pleasing personality and the faculty of making friends easily. His opinion on any matter under discussion was always highly respected for he did not slavishly confine himself to textbooks but sought a fuller and more comprehensive view of things through outside reading in books and magazines.

Jim was not an outstanding athlete, but was always an ardent supporter of college sport, and during the past year he capably filled the position of sports editor on the staff of Red and White. Other duties which he fulfilled were those of President of the Dramatic Society and of the Senior Debating Society. As a debater his keen and logical mind overcame all opposition and should he enter Law, as we are told is his intention, his forensic ability should help him a long way on the road to success. In parting, Jim, we will not say good-bye but "au revoir". Remember that there is always room for one more at the top.

F. O'C., '41

JAMES MCGAUGHEY

*"With such a comrade, such a friend,
I would fain walk till journey's end."*

Born at Green Road in August, 1916, Jim matriculated to Prince of Wales College in 1932, where he obtained a first class teacher's license in 1934. For the next two years he taught in his home school.

Jim enrolled at St. Dunstan's in the autumn of '36. During his stay here he has ever been to the front of his class, in recognition of which he has been chosen Valedictorian of the Graduating Class. He was never an outstanding athlete, but he took an active part in intramural games, especially football, softball, and track events. He has been Alumni editor of the Red and White for the past year. He has also taken a deep interest in all other phases of college life, particularly in heading the queue for night permissions to the city.

And now he is leaving us to become a new member of the ranks of our brilliant Alumni. We do not know what he plans for the future, but from his past record we are assured that success will be his.

Au revoir, Jim! You have the good-wishes of your many friends.

Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called Conscience.

George Washington.

HOWARD SYDNEY WIGHT

"An honest man's word is as good as his bond." —Cervantes.

Howard Sydney Wight born in July, 1917, at Panmure Island, spent his childhood days upon that quiet little isle, and received his elementary education at the little white school-house there. After completing his early education at Georgetown to where he had moved in 1932, he entered St. Dunstan's in the autumn of 1934. Since then, Howie has grown in wisdom and knowledge, and this year he leaves us armed with the principles of a Christian education to fight the battles of life.

Howard took a keen interest in all phases of college life at St. Dunstan's. During the past two years he has been Vice-President and Secretary of the C. C. S. M. C. Although not an active participant in athletics, he was always on hand, when a game was in progress, cheering his team to victory. Realizing that the purpose in coming to college is to acquire an education, Howard was a diligent student and made good use of his years at College, which now in retrospect seem so short.

During those years at S. D. U., Howie's good nature has endeared him to his fellow students, who will miss him next year when the roll is called. Now, Howard, that the time has come for us to bid you farewell, we wish you every success in your life work whatever it may be. Good luck, Howie, and God bless you.

Publicity attracts friends, prosperity attaches friends, but adversity is the acid test of true friendship.

Every noble life leaves the fibre of it interwoven forever in the work of the world; by so much evermore the strength of the human race had gained.

Happiness has no limits, because God has neither bottom nor bounds, and because happiness is nothing but the conquest of God through love.

—Amiel
