THE GRADUATES

ARMAND BORDELEAU

Armand was ushered into the Bordeleau family on a March morning in the year 1906. He spent his childhood in Sainte-Thecle where he attended the primary school. Upon his graduation from the little red schoolhouse, he began his college course at "The Little Seminary," Quebec. He met with much success in his studies, for not only did he have natural talent, but was studious as well.

What endeared him most to the hearts of his classmates was his untiring devotion to the Athletic Association. Although not an Athlete himself, he was a true sport and gave all his spare time to it. Due to his efforts, their class team was well organized and carried off the honors of the hockey and baseball leagues several years in succession.

In the spring of '25 he passed successfully his B-L examinations, and in the fall he came to Saint Dunstan's to begin his Arts Course and learn English in an English environment. His good-natured disposition won for him many friends and he learned to speak English quickly.

As to his future career, it is likely that he will study Chemistry at McGill. He leaves Saint Dunstan's with the heartfelt good wishes of his friends and classmates.

PETER JOSEPH FRANCIS CAMPBELL

"To find his place and fill it is success for a man."

A quiet secluded farm at Campbell's Cove, a hamlet famed for its pastoral scenery and fanned by the refreshing breeze from the Gulf of St. Lawrence, is honored in being the birthplace of this gifted and popular member of the class of '27.

Here Peter was born in July 1905, and here he spent the first sixteen years of his uncheckered life. At an early age he entered the village school, and, while there, we are told, he was considered a brilliant student and a kind school chum, and as a consequence of these traits we have him entering St. Dunstan's in the autumn of 1921.

During his terms at St. Dunstan's Peter has displayed real talent in all his undertakings. In the classroom he is hailed as a leader, and this is obvious by the fact that in 1925 he successfully passed the B.L. examinations. In debate and Mock Parliament he has spoken in a masterly manner on every important question under discussion, but at no time has he been heard to better advantage than when upholding the policies of his party. Peter has been also a valued member of "Red and White" staff for two years. As editor of "Funny Man" he has proven himself to be a man of wit.

In athletics, he has acquitted himself very favorably. As a member of second team last fall he did his share to bring back intermediate foot-ball laurels to old St. Dunstons. In hockey and baseball Peter has confined himself to intermural honors.

Now Peter goes forth from our walls well fitted to fill any profession he may choose. While here, he has, by his erudition, set for many of us an example, and we feel assured that in future years some muse will record his name among the great men of history. Adieu.—M.C. '27.

FRANCIS COADY

It was about the dawn of the 20th century, in the blustering month of March, in the atmosphere of a quiet country home at Emyvale, that Frank was born. Even from the cradle he was a sturdy, manly youth. His physical development was nourished by the exhilarating air of that rolling country-side and his first instructions in the three R's were received at his home schoolhouse.

Later, life under Western skies and experiences had in an Atlantic city helped in the development of that bigness of heart and manliness which are shown in his every act and word.

In the Autumn of '21 Frank enrolled at St. Dunstan's. Since then he has endeared himself to all, faculty and students alike.

In debate and on the floor of the House he has held his own with the best. In every circle of college life he has played a part and under the guiding hand of his Alma Mater he has made a most successful course.

On the gridiron he was a tower of strength, which he proved in his four years as a forward on the senior team. The last year or two he was unable to enter the game, but we had him with us in all our sports as President of the

S. D. U. A. A. during the year '26-'27. In '25-'26 he was Assistant Business Manager of the Red and White and this year '26-'27 he has filled the position of Business Manager very efficiently.

Congenial, yet serious in work and with a heart of purest gold, Frank Coady leaves the sheltering and molding hand of St. Dunstan's to take his place in the world "a man." What more could we say?—C.E.T. '28.

WILFRED CLAYTON CONNELL

Clayton was born at Bartibogue, N. B., one clear frosty morning in January, 1907. The arrival of a new member of the Connell family was hailed with joy by loving parents and relatives.

His early life was spent at home amid nature's grandest works: hills, forests and mighty rivers. He attended the country school until he had acquired sufficient knowledge to pass the Entrance Examinations in first division. The next four years were passed in successful study at St. Thomas College in Chatham. Then in the fall of '25 he crossed the Strait and was among those numbered at St. Dunstan's.

He came here to learn Philosophy, and now after a stay of two years with us he is well prepared to step forth and take his place in the world. During his stay here he has taken part in various sports. In football he represented the Institution each year on the gridiron against outside teams. Basketball and hockey have also found him among their devotees. In debates and Parliament his sound reasoning has been ably expressed to the chagrin of opponents.

The "Capt" has many friends, not only at St. Dunstan's, but also in the city. He has shown a particular interest in the study of Physics and Chemistry. We have an idea that he intends to follow the course of some larger University along these lines; if so, we wish him a bon voyage.—C.E.T. '28.

MICHAEL CONWAY

On Sept. 10, 1905 the population of New Zealand was augmented by the birth of Michael. Even in childhood, we are told, he showed signs of becoming a great literateur.

He was a wonderful critic of all literature, but his criticism was, however, totally of a destructive nature.

The application of his natural talents, stimulated, no doubt, by the presence of the birch rod, enabled him to master the intricacies of all the subjects taught in the village school and to attain the zenith of scholarship therein, so that when he entered S. D. U. in the autumn of '21, the thorough grounding which he had received in the three "R"'s enabled him at once to absorb, apperceive and assimilate the knowledge so faithfully offered by our professors here.

If the popularity which he has won at St. Dunstan's—especially among his classmates—and the important part he has taken in all college activities may be taken as criteria of his worth, then Michael's success, in whatever profession he may enter, is assured.

In his classes he has always ranked high and as a debater he has shown exceptional ability.

Michael has won considerable fame as an athlete, especially in football, being a valued member of the Senior Champions of P. E. I. in 1926. His athletic endeavours were by no means confined to the gridiron for he has won several prizes for running in the Field Day Sports. In other branches of athletics, although he never represented the college in outside games, he was a valuable asset to his class teams.

We will forego making any definite prophecy in regard to our hero's future, but only wish him success in life and trust that he will ever be mindful of the poet's words:

"Honor and shame from no condition rise;
Act well your part, there all the honor lies."

—P.C. '27.

J. CECIL CULLEN

On (the sunny morning of) July 28th, 1907 Cecil was born at Tracadie, P. E. I. Shortly after his birth he moved with his parents to Charlottetown and spent his childhood there.

He received his primary education in Queen Square School, and there he developed those athletic abilities by which he later won laurels for S. D. U. in many hard fought games.

In the Autumn of 1922 'Cece' entered St. Dunstan's and during his five years here he has shown himself to be a student of more than ordinary ability. In addition to being one of the youngest members of his class, he has always had a high standing in his studies, and has procured a B.L. degree. He has also been on the staff of "Red and White" as editor of the Chronicle for two years.

'Cece' has won much distinction in his athletic activities and has competently filled the positions of football representative on the S. D. U. A. A. A. and captain of the senior football team. Nor did he confine his athletic endeavours solely to football. He has represented his Alma Mater on the senior teams in basketball, hockey and baseball.

On the departure of Cecil, St. Dunstan's loses a student and athlete of great ability, but we feel confident that if he plays the game of life with the same enthusiasm and vigor as he has played the game in S. D. U., his life will be crowned with success. Though it is not known in what field of activities he is going to work, his many friends in S. D. U., join in wishing him success, and we rest assured that he will always reflect credit on his Alma Mater.

MAURICE JOSEPH CURLEY

The parish of Kelly's Cross, whence so many of the Alumni of St. Dunstan's have come, sends forth another representative this year to join that noble band in the person of Maurice Joseph Curley.

Maurice was born at Brookvale, Lot 30, October 8, 1906, and, at an early age, began his studies in the district school. Here he was very successful, and in the Spring of '22 passed the entrance examinations to Prince of Wales College. Not feeling inclined to pedagogic duties, however, he decided to enter St. Dunstan's, and, in the early days of September, 1922, we first meet our smiling friend.

In all his studies here Maurice has made a very creditable showing and, though not of a pedantic disposition, if called upon, he used his knowledge to good advantage.

Maurice's activities have not been confined to the classroom alone. As an athlete he has won intermural fame for himself on the track, on the diamond and on the ice. His football prowess, however, has not been confined to intermural fame only. He began the past football season as captain of the U. N. B. intermural team, but his splendid ballhandling, timely kicking and sharp tackling soon merited for him promotion, first to the second team and later to the first team, on which, on every occasion, he showed up well as a forward.

What his next step in life may be, we do not know, but we hope and feel that success will crown his future endeavours as it has his past. —J.P.M. '28.

FRANCIS E. DOIRON

Rustico claims the distinction of being the birthplace of this member of the graduating class of 1927. At an early age he began his studies in St. Ignatius' school, where, by his diligence, he won the admiration of his teacher and classmates. Having successfully passed the matriculation examinations he entered Prince of Wales College, in which institution he spent two years. He then became engaged in his profession for a number of years, teaching principally in Abrams Village, Elmsdale and Summerside.

Realizing that his education was incomplete, Mr. Doiron entered S. D. U. in the Fall of 1924 as a student professor, and in the following Spring successfully obtained his B.L. degree. For the past three years he has been a noted figure amongst us, distinguishing himself in his studies, in debate and mock parliament, where he always evinced a marvelous ability in dealing with important questions of the day. Mr. Doiron possesses a charming personality which has placed him high in the esteem and friendship of the students, whose sincere wishes for his future success he carries with him as we bid him—Au Revoir.—J.T. O'M. '28.

WILFRED HAROLD DUNPHY

The subject of this sketch was born amidst the beautiful scenery of Millview, August 17, 1904. Of his early life we know little except that he attended the district school; but we feel sure that, if the family records were consulted, much would be found therein concerning him. Not content with the knowledge acquired at school, he decided to imbibe deeper and in the Fall of '21 entered St. Dunstan's.

During his course here Wilfred has shown himself to be a diligent student and has won the respect of both teachers and classmates. He has always taken a keen interest in athletics and, as captain of the Waiters' hockey team, his scientific methods of offense and defense have turned, on more than one occasion, apparent defeat into sure victory. It was on the football field that Wilfred's athletic ability truly showed itself. During the past three years, as a forward on the senior football team, he has 'blown up' the hopes of his opponents several times by carrying the pigskin over for a try.

Wilfred is silent regarding his intended profession, but, whatever it may be, we feel sure that he will meet with every success, and with this wish his many friends at St. Dunstan's bid him adieu.—J.P.M. '28.

RICHARD GERALD ELLSWORTH

The last year of the eventful nineteenth century was drawing to a close, but ere the dawn of the new, the Ellsworth family, then living at Revere, Mass., was to experience much feasting and rejoicing. The occasion was the birth of our friend Richard. In that quiet and peaceful town of the glorious republic, the child grew into lusty boyhood. His 'dad,' however, remembered the never to be forgotten Garden of the Gulf, and, here we find Richard, at the age of six, playing 'tag' with the rustics of Waterford, P. E. I.

It was in the village school of his adopted fatherland, that our hero armed himself with the rudiments of knowledge. The year 1915 saw him emerge from P. W. C. the proud possessor of a first year certificate, and for some time he was employed instructing the youth.

During his college career at St. Dunstan's, Dick, besides standing at the head of his class each year, has been successful in the competition for the Alumni Essay in '25, and, the Special Prize Essay in '26. He has been chosen Valedictorian by the class of '27. The Reverend Fathers of the faculty acknowledged his ability by conferring on him the onerous task of Editor-in-chief of "Red and White"

In athletics he has always given very generously of his time, and, as secretary of the S.D.U.A.A.A. in 1925, managed the business in a manner that reflected much credit upon himself. On the gridiron, as captain of the football team, he led his team on to victory and captured the Intermediate Football Championship of P. E. I.

We have no information concerning his next move, but his many friends wish him all success in his chosen profession.—E.D. '29.

JAMES JOSEPH FARRELL

About the birth and infancy of the subject of our sketch we are almost entirely ignorant. That he was born towards the close of an era when the stiff formality of Victoria's day was making road for the easier ways of Edward's reign we are certain. We have searched the almanacs and consulted the astrologers, but we can find no record of comet, eclipse or earthquake occurring about that time, which might be a portent of the beginning of the earthly career of this giant among the Georgians.

Even in the district school of St. Georges, Jim, as he was called by his fellow pupils, (who must be forgiven this familiarity in view of the fact that he was quite an ordinary looking boy) conned eagerly and easily from the book of Knowledge. He passed his matriculation to P. W. C., studied there, and then spent some years teaching. Entering S. D. U. in 1920 he remained one year with us and found it's attraction so great that he returned in 1924, as Prefect, to complete his course.

Here Jim has pursued a course which might well excite the envy of the most brilliant. His popularity among his classmates and the student body in general is attested by the fact that the Presidency of the Debating Society has been conferred on him. He is Vice-President of his class and was leader of the Farrell-Johnston-Macdonald Government—a ministry supposed to contain all the talents (though the Leader of the Opposition informed me privately that, although they were undoubtedly clever they were all unprincipled scoundrels, and that the Premier was really a desperate character—a sort of modern Castrucchio).

In athletics our hero has displayed a prowess that has struck consternation into the hearts of his opponents on more than one occasion. As captain of the Intermural Rugby Champions of 1926 he displayed a marked executive, as well as playing ability, and he must receive credit for developing one or two players who, before the season ended, won their spurs in senior company. But we think that, although handball and tennis received their meed of attention from S..... (I almost gave it away—Jim,) hockey is the game where his amazing agility has been best displayed. To see our hero go careening up the ice, waving his stick over his head with one hand and shaking his fist threateningly at all who attempted to block his progress, never failed to terrorize the opposing team nor to raise the enthusiasm of the spectators to the highest pitch.

What Jim's future career will be we know not, but whatever it will be he goes well equipped in mind, habits and body to that field, and we know that all who have the good fortune to meet him in future years will vote him as we have voted him—a prince of good fellows.—J.R.H.F.

ANTHONY ALOYSIUS FRANCIS

“He was a man, take him all in all,
I shall not look upon his like again.”

On the morning of August 27, 1902, the rising sun was marked with an unusual refulgence. The seer of West Devon, P. E. I. forthwith augured that an interesting event was about to occur. Shortly before noon this prediction was amply rewarded when Anthony A. Francis first burst into a feeble fit of crying. As an infant, it is related, Tenny, as he is familiarly known, cried almost incessantly, but later turned to laughing. This latter happy disposition seems to have become innate in him.

At a very early age, this member of the graduating class of '27 moved to Charlottetown with his parents. Here he received his early education in Q. S. S., and later in P. W. C. Then he turned to teaching, and, for four years, by his diligence and moderate application of the 'birch rod,' as principal of Emyvale school, won the favour and esteem of both pupils and ratepayers. While teaching Tenny seems to have taken to heart the words of Pope:

A little learning is a dangerous thing;
Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring.

Consequently, we find that in the autumn of '24 the subject of this sketch crossed the precincts of S. D. U., where he was about to distinguish himself as student and prefect. The following spring, he successfully passed the B.L. examinations. In the role of prefect, he has fulfilled his duties honestly and well, both as custodian of the dormitory and as instructor of the freshmen. In the debating hall, Anthony has proven himself to be a speaker of enviable merit, an astute debater who forms his arguments from sound and logical reasoning. Coupled with his many duties as student and prefect, Anthony has capably filled the positions as editor of the Alumni department of "Red and White" this year, cadet instructor for the past two years, and a valued member of the college choir. Besides these many activities, our hero has brilliantly displayed his ability in athletics, especially in football, in which game he was looked upon as an outstanding star. Anthony is about to depart from the sheltering walls of his Alma Mater and to make a name for himself in some new sphere of life. With his departure we all feel assured that St. Dunstan's sends forth another worthy graduate to join the ranks of her alumni, a student who surely will be crowned with the pearl of success.—J.P.E. O'H. '28.

AMBROSE GARDNER

The brave man seeks not popular applause,
Nor overpower'd with arms, deserts his cause;
Unshamed, though foil'd, he does the best he can.

Nelson N. B., beautifully situated on the bank of the Miramichi River, claims the subject of this sketch as its own. In this ideal town Ambrose Gardner was born on the Ides of March 1906. His childhood days were passed very pleasantly beneath the large spruces,—common in that province,—and his education began in the village school, where some worthy pedagogue instructed him. This, however, was only the beginning, and in the Fall of 1922 he entered St. Thomas College at Chatham, N. B. to increase his store of knowledge. Here Ambie devoted himself to the study of the classics, and in three years was among the graduates of that institution. His burning desire for knowledge was still unsatisfied and in 1925 we find him a student at St. Dunstan's.

Although of a quiet and retiring nature, Ambie took an active part in all college sport. Baseball seems to be his favorite game and he is expected to be one of the nine that will represent the University on the diamond in the coming season. In hockey and handball the challengers always found a firm competitor in our hero, and time and again he has cheered the St. Dunstan's boys on to victory.

Neither must we fail to speak of his ability on the platform. In debates he has proven by his well founded arguments and ready wit that he is an orator of no mean standing. Time and space do not permit us to speak of all his good qualities but suffice it to say that the reputation he has acquired while at St. Dunstan's confirms all that we may say in his favour.

He is reserved in regard to his profession in life. We feel confident, however, that success awaits him in whatever career he may embrace, and he goes forth from the university with the best wishes of all his friends for a bright and prosperous future.—E. D. '29.

ANDRE GUILLEMETTE

The childhood days of this popular French Canadian member of the graduating class of 1927 were spent at Shawinigan Falls, P. Q., at which place he was born twenty years ago. At the early age of twelve he entered St. Mary's College, Montreal, where he spent five years. He then attended Three Rivers College. Here he completed his classical course, obtaining his B.L., and also took his first year in Philosophy.

Realizing the advantages of a thorough knowledge of the English language, he entered St. Dunstan's in the Fall of 1926, as a student of Senior Philosophy.

Although we have known Andre but a short time, we have found him in all respects to be a 'good sport.' His athletic career around S. D. U. has been confined mainly to hockey, being a valued member of the first team of 1927. And now, as he goes forth to join the Alumni of Old St. Dunstan's, we feel sure that, whatever be his chosen path, he will acquit himself at all times in a manner that will reflect credit on his Alma Mater. And with our heartfelt wishes for his future success in life we bid him a fond adieu.

J. T. O'M. '28.

JOHN JOSEPH HAGEN

The subject of this sketch is the Benjamin of the class of '27, having entered upon this pilgrimage on the 8th of September, 1907. Jack, as he is familiarly known to all, received his early schooling at the Millvale Academy and acquired such a taste for learning and baseball that he decided to come to St. Dunstan's.

He entered our institution in 1920 as a preparatory student, and since that time he has continued to make admirable progress, until now he stands ready to receive the final benediction of his Alma Mater and take his place in the ranks of the world.

Jack is deservedly popular with his fellows, not only for his unfailing good fellowship, but as well for his excellent record in athletics. He has proved an efficient and tireless worker for the first Fifteen, for the Hockey team, for the Basketball and Baseball squads. Not very frequently is it given to a man to represent his college in four sports, but Jack has accomplished that Herculean task.

We are given to understand that Electrical Engineering will be the chosen career of our hero, but whatever he may chose to do he will have the hearty good wishes of his fellows and teachers for the fullest success. May fortune smile upon you, Jack.—J.R.H.F.

JACK JOHNSTON

It was in the quiet Capital of Prince Edward Island that Jack first made his appearance on this earthly stage on June 13, 1906. As a child he was not particularly distinguishable from his fellows excepting that, even at the earliest age, he manifested a gift for verse.

“He lisped in numbers, for the numbers came.”

His first draughts from the fountain of learning were imbibed at Queen Square School, from which institution our hero matriculated to P. W. C.

In the Autumn of 1922 Jack entered St. Dunstan's and immediately became one of the leaders of his class, and in 1925 took a good B.L. But his interest was not confined to study. Athletics claimed him as well and, although his accomplishments on the field are not as great as those in the class-room, he has learned to play the game as a sportsman should and he has performed creditably on the football field—in the Arena—and in the Tennis Court.

Jack's interest in athletics was last year recognized by his fellow students when they elected him Secretary of the S. D. U. A. A. A., where his skilful management has earned him the soubriquet of John McGraw.

But we must confess that our hero has his weaknesses. He is inclined to the writing of verse and even attempts at times—much to the distress of his friends—to sing. We believe that he may outgrow this latter tendency—at least we hope. The fair sex, too, have a great interest in our hero. Whether the cause is to be found in his plain but honest countenance, or in his brilliant conversation, or in his dry and inimitable humour, we know not. We have often been tempted to ask, but shyness always overcame our valour.

Our Alma Mater can look with pride upon our hero's past record and point to a brilliant and successful future without fear of disappointment. Very probably the Bar will claim Jack and there he will prove worthy of the great traditions handed down to him, if he fulfills the promise he has given. With him goes the best wishes of his teachers and his friends for a happy and successful career.

—J.R.H.F.

JAMES AUGUSTINE MacINTYRE

“There is too much of man here, to look through
With a fit mind the might which I behold.”

On June 4, 1906, in the district of Fairfield, P. E. I., amid quiet and peaceful surroundings, “Gus” first saw the light of day. In due time he attended the district school, where the rudiments of learning were first inculcated into his youthful mind. His parents shortly after moved to East Point, where he continued his studies, graduating from the local school with his intellectual yearning still unsatisfied, and in the fall of '22 he entered St. Dunstan's.

While here Gus has ever been a diligent worker and a brilliant student but nevertheless he has not neglected to participate in other activities that go to make up college life. As an athlete he cannot be held as altogether without prowess. In football he, last fall, captained one of the Intermural teams, and as a hockey player he has won an honored place among the “Rubber Jugglers.” In debates and Mock Parliament he has often awed his opponents with his eloquence. During his college career he has won for himself a host of friends, and the esteem in which he is held by his classmates is evident by the fact that he was appointed Secretary of his class.

As to his future we will venture no prophecy, but judging by his kind disposition and genial personality, we feel assured that in whatever walk of life he chooses, the same success and happiness will accompany him which has attended him while at St. Dunstan's—L.C. '28.

ROBERT AMBROSE IGNATIUS WILLIAM MACDONALD

"Mens sana in corpore sano."

This seems to have been the guiding principle of Bob's life. Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in the year 1907, he received his early education at St. Frances de Chantal Grammar School, and later attended Brooklyn Prep. When, in 1923 his family came to dwell at Grand River, P. E. I., "Bob" began his short but successful career at S. D. U. In his few short years here he has built up a record truly worthy of emulation. He has upheld the honor and glory of "Old St. Dunstan's" in football, basketball and baseball, and it is to his untiring efforts that the latter team this year owes its success. Bob also has the proud distinction of being the present holder of the Track Record in the Standing Broad Jump. Great as have been his athletic achievements since coming to St. Dunstan's, they have in no way interfered with his studies. He is well up among the leaders in his different classes, and in the Debating Society many a confident opponent has been compelled to admit defeat by the force of Bob's impressive and brilliant oratory. His inherent business ability and sterling integrity have won for him a position on the staff of the "Red and White" in the capacity of Assistant Business Manager. He has not made known definitely his intention concerning the future, but we are confident that the same indomitable spirit that he has ever displayed at S. D. U. will assure him of success and happiness in whatever path of life he may choose to follow.—D. O'L. '28.

DANIEL CELESTINE PRAUGHT

There was great rejoicing in the home of one, Leo Praught, on a fine morning in May, 1906, when it became known that there was a new arrival in the person of a great, big bouncing boy who, in the due course of time, was named Daniel Celestine.

Amid the serene tranquility of a country environment this new arrival developed rapidly. As a boy, he attended the school at Cross Rivers, where a great desire for learning was instilled in him with the result that, when he completed his course at that institution, he entered St. Dunstan's in the Fall of 1920. After a year spent here, he remained at home for one year but returned in 1922; and 1927 finds him a graduate after completing a very successful course.

Though seemingly of a quiet disposition, our Daniel has been by no means a passive member in any of our boyish escapades, but has given us many little anecdotes to talk over in the future years. He has also taken part in every circle of the college activities. In debate and in Parliament his part has been well upheld. Hockey, football, handball and baseball have all claimed him as a participant. He has particularly upheld the athletic reputation of the College in football and baseball. In the former he was the full-back of second team, while in the latter he was our crack moundsman.

We do not know what his life's work will be, but we can safely predict that, judging from his abilities, he will uphold the traditions of his Alma Mater and will make a name for himself in this world. Run him! Daniel, and good luck to you!—R.A.I.M. '27.

CHARLES LOUIS TRAINOR

This member of the graduating class of 1927 was born in the picturesque district of Elmwood. There too he spent the early years of his life, and in the district school acquired the elements of learning. Graduating from this school at an early age, he entered Prince of Wales College where he obtained a teacher's license. Charlie taught for a number of years in different parts of the province before entering St. Dunstan's in the fall of 1919. After completing his classical course in S. D. U., he again took up teaching and taught successfully in his home school for three years. Charlie's natural aptitude for learning, however, once more caused him to turn his footsteps towards St. Dunstan's, and again to enroll as a student within her hallowed walls, this time to take up his arts course, and to become a valued member of this year's graduating class.

Charlie, though not taking an active part in college athletics, has always evinced the keenest interest in its success.

That Charlie is popular with the students is evident, that he is particularly popular with his classmates is attested to by the fact that they have chosen him as their Class President.

As predictions may err, and as Charlie has not expressed himself in regard to his future, we must leave that important matter to conjecture, nevertheless, we are certain that whatever walk in life he may follow, he will always uphold the honour both of his country and of his Alma Mater.—G.M. '28.

JOSEPH JOHN WALSH

A merrier man
Within the limits of becoming mirth
I never spent an hour's talk withal.

Our information concerning the early years of this member of the graduating class contains merely the most general facts; we know that he was born at Elliotvale sometime within the first decade of this century, that he spent his early boyhood in the wholesome environment of country life, and that he received his elementary education in the district school. From the time of his enrolling as a student of St. Dunstan's, however, we have a more detailed record of his activities, with the exception, perhaps, of certain nocturnal escapades, concerning which we have never been able to separate the truth from what is undoubtedly mere romance.

In St. Dunstan's Joe began at the very bottom of the course and by persistence and application has gradually mastered the different branches of learning, so that his graduation finds him equipped with a solid, well balanced education. He has, moreover, a mind well stored with knowledge gleaned from observation and from human experience, for he evidently believes with the poet that, "The proper study of mankind is man."

Possessed of a genial disposition and a keen sense of humor, Joe is a most agreeable companion and a general favourite among the students of all years. His wit is as ready as it is innocuous, and his hearty laugh is a sure cure for the 'blues.' That he possesses the goodwill and esteem of his classmates is attested by the fact that he has been elected a member of the class committee. In sports he is by no means a laggard; he plays all the regular college games, and in hockey proved a tower of strength to his corridor team.

We shall not attempt any conjecture as to Joe's future course, but we feel sure that his sound common sense and buoyant disposition will carry him triumphantly over the trials of life, and that, whatever sphere of activity he selects, he will meet with success. That this success may be abundant is our earnest parting wish as we bid him adieu.

MATTHEW JOSEPH WHITE

"The man worth while is the man with a smile,
When everything goes dead wrong."

In the summer month of July, some twenty years ago, Mother Earth, attired in her richest mantle, smiled her prettiest to welcome into Emerald none other than Matthew Joseph White, a member of this year's graduating class. Matthew, it is recorded, returned the greeting with a smile which has ever since remained on his countenance. This event was celebrated with great festivity; then all too soon our hero was swallowed up in the ranks of the ordinary until at an early age he evinced a thirst for knowledge. Consequently we find him in attendance at the public schools of Freetown and Summerfield, acquitting himself creditably there, and entering St. Dunstan's in 1920.

Tradition has it that at his advent to college the bards wrote of the "Evolution of Matt," and to-day what was then only a prophecy is a reality, for the youthful, inexperienced lad of 1920 has become, by his diligence and study, the intellectual and athletic "Matt" of the class of '27.

While at St. Dunstan's Matt took part in the many activities of college life. In Mock Parliament, as minister of Agriculture in the Farrell Government, he did his duty well.

An athlete of note he indulged in the different branches of sport. His real ability however in this line was shown in hockey. As Captain of our Senior hockey team for the past two years he showed himself to be one of the best net custodians in the Maritime Collegiate world. His services as a member of the Executive of the Athletic Association were appreciated by all.

Of a quiet unassuming manner, ever ready to give support to the worthy cause, "Matt" has won an enviable position in the hearts of his class mates and all with whom he came in contact during his college course.

What path our subject will follow in the future, we cannot say, but of this we are certain that in "Matt," St. Dunstan's sends forth into the world another worthy son. Au revoir, Matthew.—Anthony A.F. '27.
