

WHAT IS YOUR OPINION

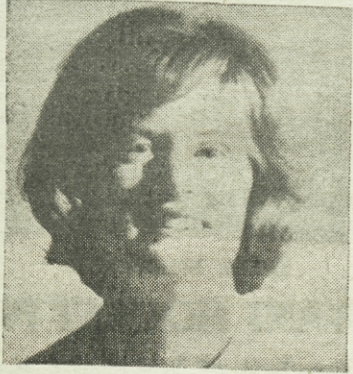

OF THE FEDERAL STUDENT LOAN LEGISLATION?

DAVID MULLALLY

Higher education is an investment, an investment for the student and an investment for the society in which he lives. In view of this fact I consider the Federal Government's Student Loan Legislation to be one of the best investments we, as Canadians, have made in a number of years.

While there are aspects of this legislation which we can criticize, I feel that in this case the end justifies the means. The result of the student loan will be that young Canadians, having the necessary talent and qualifications and regardless of their financial means, can now be assured of a university education.

KATHLEEN WALSH

In its initial purpose, the Student Loan is beneficial insofar as it provides many students with the means of obtaining higher education. However, it requires "discrimination" on the part of university students. Like many other things, it has been abused by many who are only seeking the satisfaction of their own selfish needs. Unfortunately they do not realize that they may be preventing another from attaining his desired goal. If in the future, students which it was intended, it will prove use the loan for the purpose for to be a contributing factor to the better education of the youth of "Canada".

MICHAEL LeBLANC

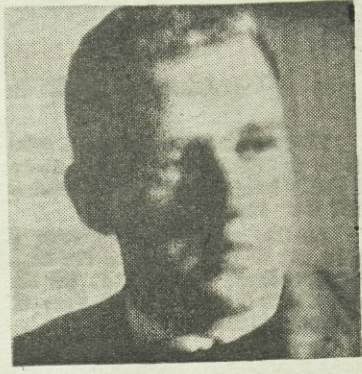

The Student Loans are very advantageous to many students who would either be forced to discontinue their studies or pay high interest rates on money while they are studying.

However, these loans should not become a means of profit. Those persons who do not require the loans should be prevented from applying. Since the benefits from these loans comes to students, it should be the students, or their representatives, namely, the Student Council who should check on the background of doubtful cases. The banks will give these loans to any one, it is true, but if these loans are abused it is the students, and not the banks who will suffer.

LYNN MURPHY

The Student Loan Plan will help many Canadians, who otherwise would end their education after high school, to enter university. With financial pressure removed more will continue for a degree, confident that their higher salaries as university graduates will enable them to repay quickly what they have borrowed. The loans are easy to get, and students have a responsible attitude towards the money. Parents may not insist on being repaid, but the government intends to collect, and this makes a student feel, "I'm doing it on my own." I like the plan because it has helped me return to college. Though unfortunately there was not enough money for all who wanted the loan, I think the plan is already proving itself of great assistance to Canadian students.

PHILIP MacDONALD

Any legislation that will enable the youth of Canada to better equip themselves educationally is most certainly welcomed. The need of financial assistance must not be only considered in financial terms but most importantly in terms of human lives and human hopes. If we are determined to build here in Canada a strong and independent society then the nucleus of this society will, of necessity, be composed of our university and technical institute graduates.

This legislation was unfortunately introduced with flaws, for the people of Canada expected a program of scholarships, not loans at 5%. The loan program is extremely vulnerable for unscrupulous exploitation.

Though this is the only accomplishment of this government, it is most creditable.

Engineers Corner

By Jack O'Keefe

The noble engineers would like to take this opportunity to thank the editor of the Red and White for allotting us space for this column.

All new engineering students are welcomed to our honorable fold. We trust that they will carry on the tradition of the older engineers. Before going on further we would like to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. John Gillis on their recent marriage. We wish them long and fruitful years of married life. Walter B. wasn't so fortunate in the valley and as a result he is a confirmed bachelor. Girls, he is available!!!

A few third year engineers have taken up juggling as an alternative to they can join the circus when they flunk. However, Joe M., who resides below them, seems to be much annoyed by their enterprise.

A Gaudet wants the engineers to build him a wagon so he can go on it more often.

From my visits to Dave P.'s trailer he seems to be enjoying trailer life. He has his pride and joy stacked on the porch.

Father MacLellan seems to enjoy the engineer's company as he has them all in the front rows in Religion class. He also rates their dependability highly.

WARNING TO NICK W. Blondes can be dangerous. We always wondered why Nick liked chemistry so much.

Marshall has denied the statement that he will plot his Land Rover against Levey's Cadillac for fear of damaging a classical car.

I've been seeing a lot of our vice-president, Mr. La Pierre, around Souris lately. I wonder why? ?

I would like to deny the rumor that engineers hold drinking parties. On the contrary I have been told to announce that the Engineers First Centennial Convention will be held Saturday night at an unknown location. I understand that this convention will be conducted in a highly business-like media. Details of the convention will be given in the next issue.

Oh, our president, Mr. Arsenault, is having women trouble at Egmont Bay. Well, so long for now I have to go and do my elicity.

ED'S NOTE:—Original plans were that only the four classes would be represented through individual columns, but due to the fact that not a single Freshman student would volunteer to write a column, the Engineer's will instead be allotted this space.

SECURITY ?

By MICHAEL O'BRIEN

"Yesterday he was everything. Today he is nothing."

These were the words spoken by millions of people across the globe when they heard that Nikita Sergeyevich Khrushchev's reign as the head of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics had come to an abrupt end. Nikita Khrushchev who for years had dictated Communist policy and who, on many occasions, had thrown fear and terror into the people of the free world was dethroned. In his place were two unfamiliar names to most people—Leonid I. Brezhnev, now the First Secretary of the Communist Party and, in fact, the real voice of the U.S.S.R., and Aleksei Kosygin, Premier.

Although the announcement of Mr. Khrushchev's removal came as a shock to almost everyone because of his apparent stronghold on the Kremlin, there is really little wonder why he was removed when one scans his record. He made a consistent failure to maintain a steady economic growth rate which involved him in disaster after disaster, culminating in a humiliating begging for wheat in the Capitalistic West. His decision, though it was probably the wisest one, to withdraw the missiles from Cuba in October of 1962, on the demand of the late President Kennedy, was a severe blow to his colleagues in the Kremlin. His handling of the dispute between Russia and Communist China did little to enhance his popularity amongst his fellow ministers of the Soviet Regime. If one takes the Russian Communist outlook on matters, perhaps Khrushchev had to go.

However, from the standpoint of the free Western World, it is sad news that Khrushchev was ousted. Although at times he seemed irrational and hotheaded in dealing with the West he always realized that there were two sides to every story—that both sides have pride—and that both sides must give a little to avoid the scourge of all mankind—thermo-nuclear war. He believed also that there could be "Peaceful Co-existence" with the West, a belief that Mao Tse-tung of China does not share.

But now he is gone from the picture. Like Malenkov and Molotov before him, Khrushchev and his family will probably disappear quietly, occasionally to be seen on a street in Moscow but never again to be the centre of attraction. Like Lenin and Stalin, he will be remembered, — remembered perhaps to many citizens of the free world as the one sensible Kremlin authority who tried to avert war, but, in any case, he will be remembered.

Now it remains to the future to decide whether or not Leonid Brezhnev and Aleksei Kosygin will be successful as leaders of Communism in Russia. How long will these two last?—No one can say. Their reign's end will probably come abruptly also as do those of so many of the chief Russians. Only Time can tell.

One year ago who would have dared suggest that both Nikita Khrushchev of Russia, and John F. Kennedy of the United States would be gone from the scene as the decision-makers of the world by October, 1964. Yet, Life plays funny tricks, and who knows what the coming year has in store for the various leaders of the world.

THE VISION TO CREATE

It has been the custom, at St. Dunstan's, to have a number of political clubs to acquaint S.D.U. students with the programs of various political parties, as well as to help them prepare for their future responsibility as a member of the electorate.

This year the St. Dunstan's Progressive Conservative Club is welcoming everyone's participation with them in the pursuit of this very important and very necessary aspect of university education. The St. Dunstan's Progressive Conservative Club is a member of the Progressive Conservative Student's Federation which, as a branch of the P. C. Party of Canada, is designed to accommodate the university student's ideals as well as to provide a comprehensive view of Progressive Conservatism, its philosophy and its aims. The P.C.S.F. co-ordinates the activities of the is a national organization which various university clubs.

The P. C. Club is not new to St. Dunstan's, it is, in fact, one of the established organizations on campus. This year the Progressive Conservatives have chosen an industrious executive, headed by Phillip MacDonald, and is striving to up-hold the tradition set in former years by the club on campus.

Its aims for this year are ambitious. Perhaps never before has the club attempted to feature so many keynote speakers, active politicians, business men, and intelligent individuals who, it is felt, can enlighten its members. Discussion groups within the club, regarding speeches heard, are to be held regularly.

In the words of the president, Phillip MacDonald: "It is a year to challenge, to build, and to strengthen, but this year depends ultimately on you, the students, whose participation in the S.D.U. Progressive Conservative Club is warmly solicited."
