

EXCHANGES

As a new year gets under way at St. Dunstan's, it is with fondest welcome that we receive the old familiar exchanges from the other colleges and universities. Through these magazines we form a more intimate acquaintance with the other institutions, and are united in a closer bond of friendship with them. We follow with interest the activities on the different campuses, and after a time feel as though we had really been there, and the leading college figures frequently appearing in the exchanges become almost as well known to us as the students of our own college. This year we are happy to see all our old exchange friends with us once more, and as we cannot treat with all in detail, we have selected a few only for special mention.

THE HOLY CROSS PURPLE

From Holy Cross College, New York, come this welcome exchange. Always containing a high-grade selection of essays, short stories, and poems, it is eagerly read by every student at St. Dunstan's. Among the highlights of November's issue, which is a typical one, may be mentioned Robert Dee's humorous episode, By Way of no Harm, Matthew Beecher's Tale of an Ancestor, and Joseph Nolan's Catholic Classic. Old School is a graphic story of the evils of gambling, and Paul Shea's Townsend is as fine as specimen of poetry as will be found in a college magazine.

The Purple however fails to give any inside picture of the college to which it belongs, and a little information along these lines would add to its interest in the future.

THE XAVERIAN WEEKLY

The Xaverian Weekly is a typical university publication, and is one of the most valuable contributions to our exchange shelf. It is imbued with the collegiate spirit, and gives us a vivid view of all the goings-on at St. F. X. Besides a varied assortment of college news, it contains forceful editorials, a good athletics column and some fine bits of humor. The Xaverian is popular here, and we hope it will continue to exchange with us.

THE BRUNSWICKAN

Another of our faithful exchanges is the Brunswickan from U. N. B. Written in a breezy, colorful style, it gives always an interesting story of the many activities of its alma mater. It would seem that the sport section is sometimes a bit partial in its write-ups, but the other articles and editorials are good, and in general, the staff of the Brunswickan are to be complimented on their publication.
