

❖ EXCHANGES ❖

The material which it has been our task to review has been of such excellence as to make our duties highly agreeable. Did any inclination to criticize adversely, exist, such a disposition was abandoned upon reading the productions of our sister universities. This department, therefore, will be devoted mainly to acknowledging exchanges and occasionally, to expressing its opinion on those which seem to merit special reference.

King's College Record.

This tastily arranged little periodical has always been highly regarded by exchange editors of Red and White. The Autumn number of 1920 is, we think, well up to the standard of other years. Worthy of special mention are the articles, "Canada's Merchant Marine" and "Ireland." We certainly agree with the writer of the latter when he says that, "An Ireland with Irish officials in charge of Irish affairs is one way out of the present difficulties."

The University Monthly.

What a vast difference a little change often makes! This is quite apparent in the October number of the Monthly. Apart from the decided improvement in the appearance of the magazine there is a noticeable change for the better in the general tone of the articles.

Le Petit Seminaire.

So far as we can learn this visitor from Chicago has never before appeared among our exchanges. As a magazine representing the work of students of a preparatory seminary it is a decidedly creditable publication. Very interesting and original is the story "A Fiddlin' Fool." The biography of Canon Sheehan seems to be the result of a diligent and careful examination of that author's works and makes a very readable article.

The Argosy.

The Graduation, October, and November numbers of this neighbor of ours from across the Straits, have already appeared. The account of closing week in the first and the sketches of the graduates in the second are decidedly well written and make these two pleasing souvenirs of Convocation Day. The October and November numbers contain entertaining accounts of class affairs and college doings. Why not give us, in addition, an occasional article on some present day topic or even your opinion on some political issue?
