OWEN CONNELLY TRAINOR

is a man of parts—speaking geographically as well as with due reference to the many qualities, capabilities, characteristics, attributes and attainments which have made him famous at a comparatively early age. Discussing the question from a territorial stand point, one part is Moncton, N. B. other parts being Kamloops, Revelstoke, Vancouver, Hunter River and Charlottetown, P. E. I. The first place named was honored by his birth, the others he graced with his presense as a school-boy. Owen, or sometimes known as “Centre,” entered St. Dunstan’s College in 1908, where he remained for some years. Leaving, however, before he completed his course he went to Montreal and took a position with the Bell Telephone Co. He resumed his studies at St. Dunstan’s as a member of the teaching staff in 1913.

Owen although of a very “retiring” and “quiescent” nature took quite an active part in sport and all social movements within the college.

As to his qualities etc., Owen seems endowed with the faculty of always being put in charge of any organization he becomes connected with. He is forever being elected a president or at least a vice-president or committeeman of something or other.

Owen was among the organizers of the “Academia” society and has the distinction of being its first president. He has also taken a keen interest in the “Red and White” being for the past two years “Exchange Editor” and a good contributor of articles from time to time.

We predict a brilliant future for our class mate as a medical practitioner and the best wishes of all Owen’s St. Dunstan’s friends will be with him as he goes parading down the years, reaching out on this side and on that to receive Presidencies, Secretaryships etc. from the willing hands of numerous admirers.

HAROLD GLEN MORRISEY

Mr. Morrisey is a native son of one of the occidental states of the great republic across the border, having been born in Seattle, Washington. The much vaunted superiority of republican institutions and the Alpine grandeur of Washington scenery, failed to attack the aristocratic tendencies and juvenile aestheticism of this infant prodigy. He preferred the romanticism of a monarchical regime with its attendant distinctions of caste, to the vulgar democracy of the principle "A man's a man for a' that." He loved to bask in the golden sunshine of a simple, pastoral countryside, rather than to stand in astonished reverence at the grim and soul-stirring vistas of Rocky Mountain grandeur. With such tastes and convictions could one do better than follow his example in migrating to fair Prince Edward Isle, and secluding oneself within the confines of that peaceful vale, Georgetown.

Glen received his early education in Georgetown High School, and in the natural course of events entered St. Dunstons's College to complete his course in Arts. During the term of his attendance here Glen has always taken an active interest in all student activities. His excellent mental equipment caused him to be felt and appreciated in the class-room ; his superior athletic abilities were instrumental in turning defeat into victory on many a hard fought field ; and his qualities as a jolly good fellow endeared him to the hearts of both faculty and students alike, and will make his graduation and consequent departure from college, a loss to be deplored

We understand that Glen intends to become a disciple of Hippocrates, and in his future calling he carries with the earnest and heart-felt wishes of his student friends for his personal success ; and their fervent prayers for the safety of his patients.

HENRI E. CREPEAU

The subject of this sketch, so far as we have been able to learn from an exhaustive study of the Vital Statistics of Quebec, was born at St. Camille, near Sherbrooke. As the above mentioned source of information deals solely with data respecting births, deaths and marriages, we were unable to learn therefrom anything more about Henri than the date and place of his birth, his name not being mentioned in the "marriage" column and we know that as yet he is very much alive. From other sources we have learned that as he "grew and waxed strong" he was sent to Sherbrooke College where he received his early education. He then entered business with his father but mercantile life could not satisfy his ambitions and in 1912 he came to St. Dunstan's to complete the Classical Course. Since entering S. D. C. he has been identified with every movement which made for the physical, intellectual or social welfare of the student body. In athletics he always evinced a deep interest and as cheer-leader at football games—so long as he did not fall under the spell of certain grand-stand attractions—he many a time cheered "Red and White" on to victory. He won fame as a hockeyist in that memorable philosophers' game played on the last feast of St. Thomas Aquinas, when Henri scores the first goal of the three which humbled the presumptuous pretensions of the Juniors. His qualities as a debator are known from the high positions held by him in Mock Parliament. In the McGuigan government he proved himself an adroit manipulator of estimates as Finance Minister, and during the last parliament he enacted with consummate mastery the honored role of Premier. In College Concerts or entertainments of any kind for the students, a vocal solo by H. E. Crepeau was always a pleasing feature of the programme, and his being a member of the famous "S. D. C. Quartette" is further testimony to the high standard of his musical talents. As a dramatist he was a member of the "Richelieu" Cast and one of the leading actors in the "Third Corridor Troupe" which successfully staged that darkly laid tragedy "The Rape of the Lock," a tragedy enacted under the glare of the flashlight instead of the footlights.

Mr. Crepeau intends to take up the study of law and will next year enter McGill for that purpose. We anticipate for him a successful career at the Bar, and we also venture to predict, that he will yet be known as one of Quebec's prominent public men.

CLARENCE JAMES CONWAY

The quiet and unpretentious city of Hampton, N. B., is as near as we can positively locate the birth-place of the hero of this sketch. The early life of Mr. Conway, like that of all great men, is more or less involved in obscurity, but after a careful examination of the archives of various places, we have ascertained the following facts. He received his elementary education in the high schools of his native town, and after a successful career therein he came to St. Dunstan's and during the six years he has been with us, has taken an active part in every field of college activity.

From the moment of his appearance the jovial laugh of the Hampton representative vibrated through the corridors. His ready wit and true sportsmanlike spirit made him a general favorite.

Mr. Conway carries an extensive honor course in his senior year, and his punctuality in keeping social engagements in the Capital has in no way militated against his class standing.

His athletic records are too many to record here. Suffice it to say that he is what might be called an all-round athlete. Although hockey is not his forte, he distinguished himself as a member of the renowned "Rubber Jugglers" when real hockey was played in the Intermural League.

"Fatty" has been a star on the baseball diamond and a tower of strength on the forward line in football. During the last two years he captained the diamond nine in baseball with no small measure of success. In the Mock Parliament he held the portfolio of Minister of Justice in the Crepeau Government, and time and time again the halls of the House of Commons resounded with his eloquence.

His one acknowledged ambition is to acquire proficiency in that part of the physical science dealing with parabolic mirrors. A pronounced trait in "Fatty's" social disposition is his marked predilection for visiting "five and ten cent" stores, and being of a migratory turn of mind, we find him on all possible, and some other, occasions, oscillating between Room 10 and the Metropolis.

He is an actor of merit, having reached the pinnacle of success in the play "Richelieu," presented in 1912 by the St. Dunstan's Dramatic Society to the theater-going public both in the Eastern and Western part of the Island.

If fortune continues to smile on him as she has in the past, "Fatty's" life will be one of ease. Owing to his being rather reticent about discussing his ambitions the writer is not prepared to make known anything definite as to his chosen profession.

Should he escape the wiles of the fair sex, we should not be surprised to see him choose the way of single blessedness. His intellectual gifts would fit him admirably to attend to the spiritual needs of man.

His departure will be greatly regretted by all his students friends, and he has the best wishes of all for unqualified success in whatever profession he chooses.

JOHN EDWIN KELLY.

To Fort Augustus belongs the distinguished honor of inscribing on it's birth register the august name of John Edwin Kelly. As a student, Mr. Kelly has established an enviable record, ranking high in the many different branches of his studies; the possessor of a keen analytical mind, a tender heart solicitous for the welfare of his fellow man, and that high integrity which is such an inseparable part of the ideal man, Mr. Kelly stands forth as the champion of honor and good fellowship, commanding our admiration and respect. Although earning for himself a worthy place on the tablets of our institution, Mr. Kelly has also been an enthusiastic participator in college sports, proving himself to be an athlete of no mean ability. Through recognition of his invaluable services on the field he was last fall elected Captain of our foot-ball team, and it was owing to his zealous, untiring efforts that the team was piloted on to victory. He has also been closely connected with baseball, and his hitting ability proved to be the death-knell of many a promising pitcher. Possessing an extensive knowledge of military tactics, he commanded our noble cadet corps, and under his rigorous discipline accomplished seeming miracles in transforming raw material into the finely finished product. Although informed otherwise, we are under the impression that he is swinging into the line for the church, and he carries with him a host of good wishes for success from his fellow graduates.

ANDRE LESSARD

A native of St. Joseph, Beauce County, Quebec, he received the greater part of his education at Ste Anne de la Pocatiere, and entered St. Dunstan's last autumn to complete his philosophical studies and acquire a better knowledge of English, in which latter pursuit he made wonderful progress; so much so that he can now converse fluently in our language, even when addressing one of the "Beau" sex. His love for books, doubtlessly contributed no little to the attainment of this result; indeed he was so fond of them that, not satisfied with their company within the walls of the Old S. D. C., he moreover sought it whilst in Town, being known as a frequent caller at a certain well-furnished book-store.

Andre is of a quiet and unassuming disposition and was never known to lose his temper, save when he has had to deal with "images." Its the real thing that Andre wants.

Although not a participator in athletics, he nevertheless takes a keen interest in them, and is always there to give the boys a cheer. He is an ardent lover of the pipe, and, through "Forest and Stream" often wander his thoughts. As to his future, well, Dame Rumor has it that he will enter the business field—handling some "stationary" line no doubt after the invaluable experience he acquired this year in this particular branch. But we are rather inclined to believe that Aesculapius will count him among one of his disciples—healing (he)art being his "forte." In whatever profession he may choose we wish him all good luck.

JAMES A. MacDOUGALL

This member of the graduating class hails from Grand River, P. E. I., but little is known of his career prior to the autumn of 1903, when he first made his appearance at St. Dunstan's. In the following spring he secured a teacher's license and, armed with this and a stout birch, betook himself to the rural districts where for two years, he devoted his talents to implanting in youthful minds the principles of a general education. He then returned to St. Dunstan's and drank copiously of the fount of knowledge for another year, after which he spent several years in teaching, both in his native province and in the Canadian West.

The autumn of 1913 found him back once more in "Old St. Dunstan's," where he has since remained. Last autumn he was promoted to a professorship, which position he has filled with that same degree of thoroughness which characterizes his every undertaking. He has also been during this year the faithful custodian of the "New Dormitory."

"Jimmie" is a man of many and varied activities. As editor of Red and White he has shown himself to be a journalist of no mean rank. In athletics he has always taken a prominent place and, during the year just closed, has occupied the presidential chair of the S. D. C. A. A. A. As a member of the senior football team for the past two years he has won the admiration of both supporters and rivals in many a hardly contested game. In hockey circles he is best known through his connection with the famous Rubber Jugglers of which he was by no means one of the least, while both on the baseball diamond and on the handball alleys he has given ample proof of his athletic ability.

But the class room, the campus, and the editor's chair are not the only places where "Jimmie" shines. He is equally at home on the public platform, in the house of parliament, on the stage, or in the drawing room?. His genial disposition has won the affection of his fellow students and created for him a host of friends. His class mates, realizing his many excellent qualities, have conferred on him the highest honour in their power to give, making him valedictorian of his class. As to his future career, it is generally understood that he will take up the study of medicine and, in this, we wish him every success.
