OFF THE CUFF

After the storm last week it seems redundant to say "Winter is here" but since I like the word, redundant that is, I'll say it again. "Winter is here." Winter is always pictured as a time when everything stops growing. From my observations this is so false. Just look at the beards it brings forth. The number of beards may be a good way of forecasting whether the winter will be cold or not. If you ever see a Co-ed wearing one, let me know and I'll be southbound within an hour.

Really girls, a beard is not that bristly on your Cameo cheeks. Don't take my word for it. Ask Jane.

That name brings my pen to those St. Mary's girls, I used to feel so sorry for you as you trudged through mud and snow to reach S.D.U. But, no more, for I saw Dr. Zhivago and now I see why you skip that bus ride. It's not because the bus leaves at 7:40 a.m. — Heavens no! It's because it is so much more romantic to be like Lara and trudge that Gaza Strip to reach your loved ones over here. I'm proud of you. It's so nice to know you care — sigh.

Speaking of Care, you affluent College students could make up a Care package of sink plugs for those underprivileged residents in Dalton Hall. Deprivation in the midst of plenty is always so hard to reconcile—Don't you think? You might just write a note to go with the package. You see, they may unwittingly flood the place.

Praise the Lord and pass the amendments! We had a quorum at our Semi-annual Students' Union Meeting. We were hung up by such words as Annual, Semi-Annual, etc., but we did find out about our financial situation to the end of October. I didn't understand it all but Bob I've got to hand it to you, it sure looked fancy.

Sincere congratulations to the Administration for giving our exam schedule so early.

My editor wants me to mention, grass, marijuana, class cuts. So much for my literary freedom.

Girls! Did you notice the sign in the Coffee Shoppe? May I remind you that men still look for a certain amount of the Homemaker in his prospective wife. Of course, there's always a career. The way I see it, eating like a bird is one thing but flying off and leaving your dishes is quite another!

Oh, by the way, that clock on the first floor of Duffy Science is displaying marked anti-social behavior. It seems to be still hanging on to Daylight Saving Time. This is not a good advertisement for our Psychology Dept. After you've finished with the rats would you try some non-directive therapy on the timepiece?

Speaking of rate, what are we going to do about our periodical section in the library? Before you even look there, you know you're going to find the volumes before and after the one you want. The place is fast becoming a paranoid's Hell. This situation is not a reflection on our Library Staff but I can't say the same for the rest of us. Remember that saying about lighting one little candle, students, and, to get the most good out of it, put it as close as you can to the seat of the guilty party or parties.

How about the changing the name of the Gym from Alumni Gym to Teeny Bop Haven. Granted those kids never had so many chaperones in their life but I thought the dances were for our benefit? Maybe the term "chaperone" is not appropriate enough. How about babysitter?

The dance situation must really annoy the non-drinkers on our campus. They paid for a fancy identity card and can only use it at the library while the rest of us can use it at the BIS, Brace, Legion, Field & Stream, ad infinitum. The thought just struck me! Maybe, just maybe, we could use it at our dances.

Welcome back, Canon Ferguson, you are joining an illustrious counseling staff, including of course the one who inhabits the common Chapel across the hall from your office. The Americans may have God on their side, but we have Him on our staff. Beat that Uncle Sam.
