

ATHLETICS

Of the four seasons in the year Spring has, perhaps, the greatest outdoor appeal. This urge to get out in the open is especially strong for students who are preparing for final examinations; their program demands outdoor exercise.

With the first signs of Spring the handball alleys at St. Dunstan's are cleared for action. The popularity of this game is readily shown by the mad rushes of students for the first chance to play.

When the campus was sufficiently dry the softball league began. This year there were five teams, three of which were from Dalton Hall. The spirit of competition between the corridor teams assured the success of the league. The finals saw First D. H. opposed by Second and Third O. B. Led by their mighty pitcher, Felix Connolly, Second and Third O. B. clinched the championship of the league.

At the time of writing a start has not yet been made in baseball, but within the next few days a league will swing into operation.

Other means of athletic diversion are tennis and ping-pong, with just a sprinkling of golf behind Dalton Hall.

A brief summary of the year's sport at Saint Dunstan's will serve as a curtain for this department.

The struggle for football supremacy between the Nomads and the College team proved to be one of the keenest and closest series ever staged. Weather conditions made the deciding game impossible and the College still holds the Island title.

P. W. C. won the Inter-Collegiate title by defeating Saint Dunstan's second team. The Red and White squad made a fine showing and their spirit insures the success of next year's season.

The basketball team, working under great handicaps, did surprisingly well.

P. W. C. scored again when they took the Intercollegiate hockey championship, plus Wellner trophy from Saint Dunstan's. The victory was well earned.
