

St. Dunstan's Red and White

Ex eodem fonte fides et scientia

VOL. XXXVIII.

NOVEMEBER, 1946

NO. 1

Acceptance

By what strange ways I've come into this resting,—
What rough and winding ways;

Through what unanswering silences and questing
And lonely anguished days.

Through what unlawful wars and rebel hopings
I have endured, to know

This peace of quiet, yielding this surrender
Of stubborn heart and will:

This leaning on a sore, so deep, so tender;
That pain at last is still!

—Lucy Gertrude Clarkin.