

St. Dunstan's
Graduating Class of

MICHAEL EDWARD BERRIGAN

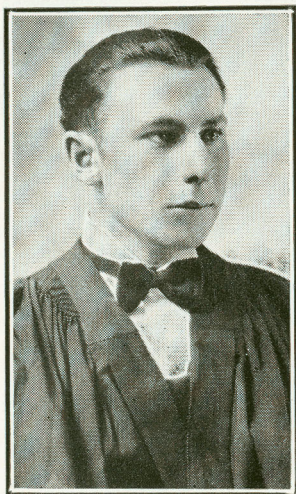

To the City of Charlottetown goes the distinction of having been the birth-place of this prominent member of the nineteen thirty-two graduation class. Of his early life nothing need be said, except that he attended Queen Square School, where he acquired, among other things, a thirst for higher education. With this object in view, "Buff" as he is familiarly known, enrolled at St. Dunstan's in '27, at the age of sixteen.

His record at St. Dunstan's has been such as to excite the admiration of both faculty and students. Although unflinching in his attention to class work, he has by no means disregarded the other activities of college life. He has engaged in Athletics to a considerable extent, and dramatics, too, have claimed a share of his attention.

Words fail us in an effort to express our commendation of this genial senior. He is a universal favorite. His unflinching good humor and pleasant smile, tempered with a wise and thoughtful contemplation of the more serious things in life, are among the qualities which have won for him a host of friends, to all of whom he clings with canine-like devotion. We are pleased at this time to join with these numerous friends in congratulating "Buff" upon the completion of his studies at St. Dunstan's.

We know not what course in life he intends to follow, but we venture the opinion that should mercantile pursuits engage his attention, his success is assured. Indeed, possessing, as he does, the necessary qualifications, we feel confident that no matter in what direction his inclinations may tend, our friend Edward will be a "leader of the pack."—

DONALD IGNATIUS CAMPBELL

The wealth of material which confronts us in attempting to write a biography of our friend "Donald," causes us to hesitate in our choice.

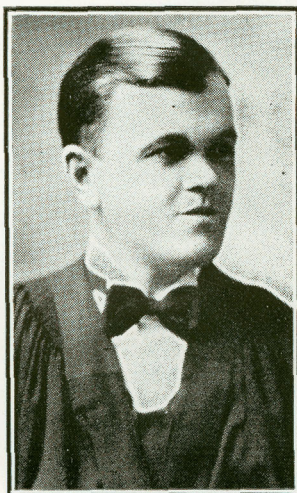

Donald came into our midst in the year '27 from his native district of Red Point, where he obtained the rudiments of his education, and during his college career has established for himself an enviable scholastic record.

Always a contributor and hearty supporter of Red and White, he was this year appointed assistant business manager, a position which he competently filled. But his efforts were not confined to studies alone, for, possessing a well-developed physique, he entered whole-heartedly into all branches of athletics. He excelled in handball, and on the gridiron his aggressiveness and skilful tactics made him an outstanding front-liner of our senior fifteen for the past three years.

His ready wit coupled with a pleasing manner has made him a popular student, and a friend of all; but it is only the few who have been privileged to know him intimately, who can fully appreciate the depth and worth of his character.

Donald will soon be going forth to join the ranks of our Alumni, and, although he has not revealed his future plans, his past successes naturally lead us to expect great and noble things of him. Thus it is with a spirit of regret that we see him depart, and we extend to him our sincere wishes for that success which should crown the efforts of one who has proven himself to be a true gentleman, a loyal and worthy friend.

JOHN DANIEL KELLY

John was born on the third of January 1905, at Bear River. He attended school at the latter place, where he received the solid foundation for his later education at St. Dunstan's. He came to St. Dunstan's in 1926, and as a student has succeeded well during each year of his college life. He has been a constant and zealous worker in search of knowledge; and will always continue to seek for more and more knowledge. John entered enthusiastically into all forms of sport, but he shone most brilliantly on the gridiron, where as lock for the senior team's scrum, in many a hard fought battle, he proved himself a most capable and heady player. He always played the game as a true sport, and we know in the greater struggle of life John will continue to exhibit the spirit of sportsmanship in the true sense of the word.

John was well liked by everybody, and was, and is, a friend of all. He was one of the most popular students, and his friendly disposition will make him well liked anywhere. He loves fun, and can be humorous or serious as the occasion demands.

What course he will follow we do not know. But whatever he does he will do well. When John leaves he will be missed by all, both on the campus and on the old gridiron. We shall follow his endeavour with friendly interest, and on his departure we bid him farewell, wishing him the best of luck and happiness.

JAMES HAROLD LYNCH

One of the most prominent members of this year's class is James Lynch. Ottawa, Ont. was Jim's birthplace, but Donaldston, P. E. I. claimed him at an early age as one of her sons. Here Jim acquired his rudimentary education, and laid the foundation of those sterling qualities which characterized him during his career at St. Dunstan's. In the fall of '26 Jim entered St. Dunstan's, where his winning manner and ready wit endeared him to many, but especially to his class mates.

As a student Jim won the respect of all. Diligent application to study during study periods enabled him to take an active part in all other college activities. He was twice appointed to the staff of our college magazine, and for the past year was its energetic Business Manager. As an athlete Jim confined his attention mainly to football, and our senior team loses in him a half-liner of no mean ability. Hockey, handball, and baseball also received due attention. As a fitting recompense for his enthusiastic support of athletics, Jim was elected President of St. Dunstan's A. A. A. for 1931-32.

Fully conscious of what an ideal education should consist in, Jim has always endeavoured to maintain an even balance in his studies, with the result that he leaves St. Dunstan's admirably fitted to cope with the many difficulties of life.

As to his future we can only conjecture, but whatever his plans may be, our most sincere wish is that the success, which was his at St. Dunstan's, may attend him through life. With this thought in mind we bid him Adieu.

DENIS JOSEPH McCARTHY

On February 7, 1913, Joseph McCarthy was born in St. John, N. B. His early education was begun at St. Vincent's High School, where he spent four years. After completing his course there, he attended Rothesay Consolidated. In the fall of '28 Joe entered St. Dunstan's and within a short time proved himself an exemplary student.

Nature has gifted him with a literary ability, which he has used to advantage, and on account of which he carried off the prize for the Alumni Essay of 1931. This essay and his many other contributions to the Red and White have merited much praise. During the past year he was manager of the Jungle Department, in which capacity he proved himself extremely capable.

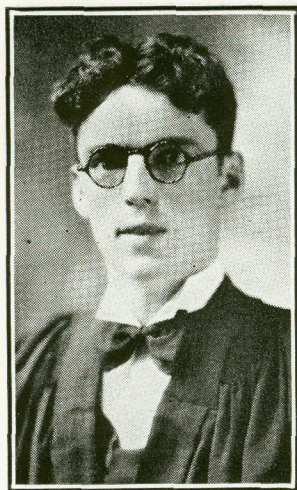

It must not be concluded that Joe has given all his time to literary pursuits; for, since his arrival at St. Dunstan's, he has been an active participant in the various forms of sport. He firmly believes in the old proverb:

"Mens sana in corpore sano."

Joe is a brilliant conversationalist and a pleasant companion. His sterling character and cheerful disposition have made him a general favorite with the professors and students.

Although he has not intimated to us his plans for the future we are confident that success will attend his efforts in whatever profession he may choose. And now, as he goes forth from our Alma Mater to join the ranks of her Alumni, wishing him every success, we bid him—Adieu.

REGINALD IGNATIUS McKENNA

It is a general belief fondly held by the populace of Oyster Bed Bridge that November the 7th, 1911, is a date which will be recorded in local history as the birthday of one of its most brilliant sons, for on that day was ushered into their midst, our friend, Reginald Ignatius McKenna. And, if one's college career is any criterion of one's ultimate success in life, then the above hypothesis will in time be substantiated by fact, for Reggie leaves in the annals of his Alma Mater a brilliant record.

Realizing the necessity of a good background for future advancement, he attended Prince of Wales College for one year, and then entered St. Dunstan's University to complete his course. Here, by his naturally acquisitive mind and methodical application to his studies, he has attained a record which points him out as an exemplary and outstanding student. Besides being a consistent prize-winner, he has been successful in passing the B.L. examinations upon completion of Second Arts. In recognition of his literary ability, he has been entrusted for the past two years with the editorship of the Chronicle Department of Red and White.

Having early conceived the idea that a sound mind depends upon a healthy body, he has supplemented his studies with active participation in different sports.

Where he will go from here is at present unknown to us, but the qualities that have enabled him to leave behind him at St. Dunstan's a brilliant record, will no doubt assist him in achieving the success of his future endeavours.

JUSTIN LEONARD MacLELLAN

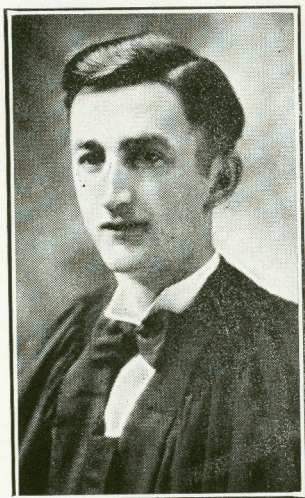

Grand River is the honored birth-place of our friend Justin, and it was in 1910 that his family were overjoyed by his arrival. He came to St. Dunstan's in the fall of 1927 and entered grade eleven.

Justin's five year sojourn here has been one of continued success. He was a member of the first football, playing half-back, and baseball teams, being representative for the latter during the last two years. On the track and in the jumping pit Justin is unbeatable with the result that he has been the champion all-around athlete on field day for the last two years. Besides being a brilliant athlete Justin is an ardent student and has always passed his grades easily. He also takes an enjoyment in social activities, and when general permissions come around he is inevitably found on his way to town. Where he goes and what he does while there is not a question to be answered here.

Justin has always been well-liked among all the students of the college, and he takes great interest in the students' well-fare. We shall miss him greatly next year, but the years which he has spent here can always be remembered. On the debating floor he can more than hold his own, and as vice-president of our dramatic society this year he has performed his duties creditably and well.

We do not know what career he will pursue when he has graduated; but if we can judge by the past, the future augurs well for him. Fare-well, Justin, and may we often hear from you.

HENRI ARMAND MELANÇON

Henri, the only French Canadian of this year's graduating class, first saw the light in the beautiful little town of St. Barnabe, Nord. Quebec, where he was ushered into the world on the first of May, 1910. At the age of six Henri attended the convent of the Sisters of the Assumption, where he received his elementary education. Henri, however, went further afield in the quest for knowledge and entered the Seminary of Three Rivers where he obtained, at the end of his course, his B.L. degree.

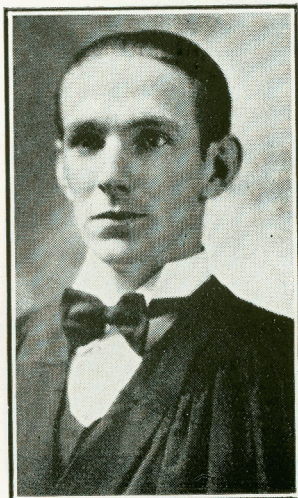

Henri came to St. Dunstan's in 1930 and entered the Junior year. He quickly became acquainted with the students, and his pleasant disposition and cheery smile soon won him a host of friends.

Although Henri does not indulge to any great extent in sport, nevertheless he is an ardent sportsman and eagerly follows up every phase of sport.

As to his future career Henri has given us no inkling, but we feel confident that in whatever station of life he enters, he will be successful, because Henri has the personality and ability to turn to success anything he attempts.

Vale Henri, may the Goddess of Success crown your every endeavour. We shall always remember you as a loyal, steadfast friend, a true gentleman and a real pal.

JOHN A. OSWALD MURPHY

Our friend "Os" first saw the light of day in Tignish toward the end of the year 1910. Since he showed a natural leaning toward study it was decided that he enter St. Dunstan's, and so in 1926 we find him in the tenth grade of our institution.

"Os" then began an athletic career which will long be remembered here. In football, hockey, baseball, and on the track he performed brilliantly, being successively elected football and hockey representative. Many a time "Os" has brought the cheering football spectators to their feet with his elusive, lightning-like breaks through opposing half-lines.

Not only on the athletic field does our friend excel, but he is also an adept student. The past year he capably performed as president of the Senior Debating Society; he is also an active member of our dramatic society, and executes difficult roles behind the footlights with an ease which betokens ability. "Os" has been blessed with a very genial disposition so that all his acquaintances are his sworn friends. As to what vocation he will take up after graduating we are not aware, but we know that he will make a success of it. What we do know is that we shall all miss him next year and so here we take the opportunity of saying "Good luck, Os, and may fortune follow you."

WILLIAM ARTHUR REDDIN

To attempt any comprehensive sketch of such a colorful and multilateral career as Bill's, in such a short space would be a sheer impossibility; so the following is but a slight view indeed of the life of one of St. Dunstan's most prominent students. Bill's earthly existence began at Charlottetown where he was born on January 17, 1910.

Bill received his primary education at Queen Square School, then entered Prince of Wales College where he spent two years. In both institutions he passed with high honors and left a brilliant record as a student.

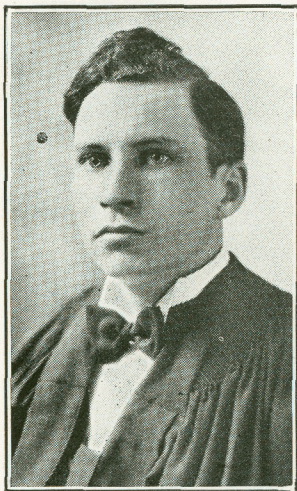

Upon obtaining his license Bill taught one year in Southport, then entered S. D. U. in 1928, where he performed the duties of prefect with his characteristic efficiency and conscientiousness.

Bill's personality and disposition made him a prime favorite among the students and gained him many life-long friends. His popularity and ability were most fittingly attested to, when he was chosen by his class-mates to be their Valedictorian.

Both as a writer and speaker Bill has a high reputation. In our debating society his eloquence and logic delighted and convinced us, while our college magazine, Red and White, of which Bill this year is editor, received many contributions from his facile pen.

Bill will make a success in whatever profession he selects as his life work, because as the adage sagely recalls, "You can't keep a good man down." Farewell Bill, we know you will maintain the wonderful record you made at St. Dunstan's, and may good fortune shower all you attempt with a plentitude of success.

JAMES E. IVAN TRAINOR

During the fall of 1926 St. Dunstan's received within its paternal walls a quiet pensive youth, who desired to receive the elements of a good education so that his journey along life's devious way might be a pleasant and successful one. Ivan was born in Charlottetown where he received his earlier education at Queen Square School, and, since he evinced an aptitude for learning while there, his success as a student at St. Dunstan's is readily to be inferred.

He did not take an active part in sport, but he was always a lively enthusiast. Nature did not give him great athletic abilities, but this deficiency was made up by the whole-hearted encouragement he gave to younger students who were more naturally endowed than he.

In the class room and on the debating floor he showed a mind that was well trained by diligent reading and hard work at studies. Although he seemed a quiet and unassuming fellow, his ready wit and humor was always a source of much merriment to his companions. Ivan is not the type that one gets to know in a day, but, as you penetrate the mist of his reserve, you can see more plainly the gentlemanly qualities which make him loved and esteemed by his friends.

About his future, Ivan has always been reticent, but, no matter what obstacles he may encounter on the road beyond St. Dunstan's, we feel confident that, with his pleasing personality and sterling character, he will surmount them and attain unlimited success.
