

MAC'S RUMBLINGS AND GRUMBLINGS

By MIKE McCORMICK

The Prof of the week award goes to Doc Murphy of Soc 100, who has shown himself to rank above his peers by introducing a special innovation in the field of classroom performances. The award is given to the Doc because of his groovy plan for assigning each and every one of his students their very own chair, to have, to hold, and to cherish for the remainder of the school year. Murphy really hit the nail on the head when he also decided to mark down the names of those callous enough to leave their chairs empty during one of his scintillating lectures. In previous years, all the profs used this system, but unfortunately it was dropped due to the pressure of a small minority group called the student body — actually just a lunatic fringe of the academic community . . . Congratulations Doc. Keep up the good work but don't be surprised if most of your ungrateful charges forget where their chairs are next week and foul up your little system. Castigate them . . . The frustrated Nellie award for the week goes to the Dean of Women who has begun, again, the old pernicious practice of the 'in loco parentis' principle; interrogating girls, questioning them on their love life and generally taking very good care of their affairs . . . This is actually a marvellous theory of female education. Let's face it — S.D.U. broads are basically incapable of figuring anything out for themselves; and it is a well known fact that Prince Edward Island girls are nothing but windless, feckless fools. The only thing that disturbs us is that one of them just might have a brain or two . . . Anyway, on with the dance sister, let your joy reign unconfined. As long as the girls are under your thumb they just might don the black and white and meddle with somebody else's life somewhere . . . The football team deserves nothing but the greatest amount of praise for their performance in Halifax last weekend. We all feel quite confident that, had they been playing on a dry field, the Saints would still be number one. The best way that they can prove that they are at the top of the heap is to maul St. F.X. by a much larger score than the SMUs were able to amass . . . Congratulations also to the legions of Saints fans that made the trip over to the big city, and who sat in the rain throughout the game . . . Those of you who will be lucky enough to be around here next year will be cheering the league champs . . . Dut to another brilliant move on the part of some dolt, the rink melted last weekend, resulting in huge ridges all over the ice that will take days to repair. And the Saints have a league game in two weeks.

Still no hot water at night in Memorial Hall. Most annoying. What the hell is happening? What would the administration say if none of the residents washed for two weeks, and hummed so badly that classes had to be called off . . . Or better still, what if they decided to go over to Bernadine to get clean . . . Cleanliness is next to Godliness, they say . . .

Noticed a great idea over at Saint Mary's last weekend. At half time they sold beer in a certain corner of one of their new buildings. We could easily do the same. There is profit involved . . . If anybody can come up with some ideas on what to do with a whole lot of bread, please send them to me care of the R & W, and I will forward them to the "proper authorities" (namely Howie and Laurent).

A recent PWC visitors to our campus, made a very good point over a bridge game, when he suggested that the major difference between our respective student councils was that ours is overly concerned with making a profit, whereas theirs is mainly involved with having as good a year as can be arranged with whatever funds are available . . . When the hell are they going to decide what to do with the barns? . . . Still no improvement on the lineups on the cafeteria. The situation is getting even more preposterous than ever before. Have you ever seen a spontaneous food riot? It's a hell of a lot of fun, but very messy and very expensive . . . Memo to J. G. The person you thought you were talking about at a recent SDC meeting was not your loyal reporter . . . Believe it or not there is some question as to whether or not the new University will be situated out here . . . The dissenters say that the SDU site is too isolated. If they want to see what happens to a University that is not too isolated I suggest they take a peek at the Sir George Williams campus in Montreal. The front part of their university is on Drummond Street, and the rear is on Stanley. The only grass they have is the kind you smoke . . . Et le mot pour cette semaine . . . Merde . . .

HOLA! AMIGOS

It is a pleasure to announce a series of slides and films designed to acquaint you with the history, the culture, the music, and the people of the major Spanish speaking countries in the world today. You will have the chance to travel through Mexico, Guatemala, Venezuela, Columbia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, and of course Spain. This program, of 8 evenings, will be sponsored by the Spanish Department and co-sponsored by CIASP. All members of the faculty and study body at both S.D.U. and P.W.C., and also the residents of Charlottetown and other Island communities are cordially invited to attend these showings. (Admittance free — expenses have been looked after by the above departments.)

Since the choice of Mexico City for the 1968 World Olympics has aroused an interest in the cultural background, and daily life of our neighbours to the south, it seems a propos and commendable for an endeavor of this kind to be made at this time.

For everyone who lives in North America there is one other person in the world who speaks Spanish. Movies, magazines, newspapers, radio and television programs are shown, played and printed in five continents. Do you realize that there are over a million people in New York City, alone, who speak Spanish?

The story of these people and their countries will be presented on two evenings before Christmas and six evenings after. We look forward to this enlightening set of programs and wish those members responsible a most sincere success.
