Christmas in Poland

They will remember: back of darkened windows
The flame of faith burns on,
Though ashes mark the place of ruined altars
Where Christmas candles shone;

Though from the blackened, devastated belfries
No bell may call to prayer,
Hearts shall be lifted up in hidden places
And peace be with them there.

Not all is lost: though joy is gone with freedom
And lights of greeting dim,
One changeless Hope remains—One Power to strengthen,
They will remember Him.
