WE WANT FREE EDUCATION

Pat Kenniff, President of CUS the Canadian Union of Students, recently paid a visit to our fair campus. Mr. Kenniff, a graduate of Loyola College in Montreal, is a native Montrealer and a large, brilliant young man who plans a career in Law. His term as CUS president will conclude next September, and he has begun this career brilliantly by visiting us (amongst others, of course).

While he was here, I had a chance to have a good long talk with him on a number of things, "free" education in particular.

We weren't seated for long when he was quick to clarify the very well recognized fact that there is no such thing as a free meal, or four years of them, at some college or University. By free education, he was merely implying that common sense concept backed up soundly by the U.N. Bill of Rights: namely, as he said himself "seeking to provide an opportunity for all those qualified to secure a higher education." I could only sympathize with him. I have never seen why a worthy Swedish student can go to college without financial worry, and even travel in the summers if he wishes, while his comparatively well-off, affluent North American cousin has to get ulcers over his five-hundred dollar tuition fee, and work Gene Summers like a slave to break even.

Why is this, I wondered.

Pat had the answer to that one too. It was simply that we here in Canada had made no commitment to higher education. We had not yet realized the very real value of higher education. We were too narrow of mind, and blind of vision to see, as did the great Economist, Edward Denison that a country's gross national product grows with its number of educated people.

Education is important, vitally important. A country's very economy depends on it, as does its cultural development, and its political awareness.

P. C. SPEAKS

'Morality is an absolute essential in public life', said Erik Neilson, the Progressive Conservative candidate for the Yukon who addressed an assembly of some 400 people in the Saint Dunstan's University auditorium on Friday, October 1st. Mr. Neilson stressed that morality in the Government is one of the major issues in this election campaign.

Mr. Neilson claimed that the last Liberal Government had not been entirely moral in their handling of the offices entrusted to them. He then cited a number of examples to substantiate this accusation.

Noted for his part in the discovery of the 'Rivard Scandal' and the subsequent calling of the Dorion Inquiry, Mr. Neilson referred numerous times to his major scandal presenting a grim picture of the Liberal Government. He also accused Social Credit leader Robert Thompson of being Prime Minister Pearson's puppet, whose strings were pulled whenever the Liberal needed a majority in the House of Commons.

'We have the weakest and the most vacillating Prime Minister

"Student aid is not the answer," continued Mr. President, pointing out to me that very obvious situation (unnoticed by our politicians) that this aid can never keep up with rising student costs. More and more money is needed, and yet never enough. It is unbelievable just what expansion is going on in educational facilities today. Pat is a Loyola man himself. When he first went there in High School, there were 200 students in the University. Now, there are something like 2000. The money for this has to come from somewhere, and the poor English-speaking catholic ghetto of Montreal is not the place.

In a more local context, why must an Islander who wishes to go to a home University pay close to $500 in tuition, while his California cousin pays nothing. It is certainly not because he is so much richer than his Southern cousin. Chances are, he is a good deal poorer.

This was Pat's message — Why haven't we made a commitment to higher education yet? why haven't we declared ourselves champions of learning? of a happy and secure future? Where is our sense of Justice? We spend all sorts of money on defense and fortunes on offense. How about a little money for some real progress? THINK.

If I found the interview over too too quickly. It is most interesting to find some who does a little thinking at least. So many of us just accept the norm, go along with what is in, and never question the shit that is handed down unto us. If Pat was saying nothing else, he was telling us, the Students of Canada, to think, when it came to this matter of free education. He wants us to think WHY the grass is really greener on the other side of the fence. He is a real wicked pusher for fertilizer.)

The Canadian University student may have to pay his way yet for many years, but, as far as I am concerned, as a movement for justice to the worthy student, free education is in.

In Loving Tribute The S - In

The Staff of the RED AND WHITE would like to offer their sincere thanks to the students of S.D.U. for their unanimous and total support of the Movement which swept this school on the 14th and 15th of this month. It was learned that literally droves of students participated in the numerous sit-ins. Special rooms in the various residences were provided for this purpose and equipped with the necessary facilities. Even so, the participation in the movement was found to be so universal that large queues began to form in the corridors for the privilege of sitting-in, even if only for several minutes.

Several questions were asked the candidate for Member of Parliament in the next election; his replies were seemingly adequate though perhaps less than thorough. Two senior students of St. Dunstan's University asked interesting and pinpointing questions to which the speaker replied in an amiable and thoughtful manner.

This tribute, paid by the students of S.D.U. is a fitting and moving expression of the high regard in which their cafeteria is held; and, it is hoped that the nature and form of the tribute will live on in the memory of the students of this university as the embodiment of their enthusiasm for the imaginative and dynamic quality of their meals.

HELP — I NEED SOMEBODY!

CANADIAN UNIVERSITY SERVICE OVERSEAS

For the benefit of those who do not know what Canadian University Service Overseas (CUSO) is, and for those who have only a vague idea of what it is, I will explain it here.

CUSO may be said to be synonymous with education. Particularly of the children of underprivileged countries throughout the world. But what does CUSO do? The CUSO Organization takes primarily university graduates, but also nurses, engineers, accountants, etc. etc. orientates them, and then sends them to countries throughout the world that are in dire need of their services.

These volunteers are not required to live in "mud hut" accommodations. Experience has shown that in 95 per cent of the cases the accommodations are for the most part adequate and comfortable. Experience has also shown that the wages paid by CUSO are sufficient to cover the cost of living in whatever particular country they may be. In Ghana for example, almost all of the CUSO volunteers had either a car or a Honda, yet they still managed in many instances to save a small portion of their wages.

CUSO is a non-profit organization that has for its object the welfare of underprivileged peoples throughout the world. The organization has been growing steadily since its inception four years ago. This year the federal government of Canada granted CUSO five hundred thousand dollars so that it could expand greatly the valuable work that it has been doing. At the recent conference in Ottawa, the organization, because of this grant, was able to expand its membership to 128 delegates from 80 and they now have eight full-time officers whereas formerly they had only three.

CUSO is progressing steadily forward. Potential volunteers are asked to contact David O'Brien, Room 1-11 Memorial.
