

Large and small puffs of snow,
Edges goldenly lit by the sun,
Sailing breezily through the heat,
In a sea of deep, dark blue,
Are beautiful to behold.

I see the dead ashes; grey, black :
Burned out match, cigarette
Burned down to the filter;
Nothing left. That last
Remnants of smoke curl
Up into the breeze and
Float away into NADA.
The glass ash tray is warm.

It turns cold, deathly cold;
Ashes are cold too. No more
Warmth in the decayed
Body of the filter.
Everything is cold with Death. Light another
And watch it burn to Nadaness.
Why do you do it ?
Do You do it ?

Jump, he does and all to
Be seen is the ring of Water made when the trout
Leaves it for the fly. Now
Another where returns
The fish with his prize.
Food for the morning
It has now and the
Fisherman has lost
His fine morning meal.

POETRY BY ROBERT F. PETTIT

WE
We're lonesome lads,
We're lost,
We don't know where we are going.
But if we knew,
We wouldn't tell,
'Cause without a doubt
We're going to hell.

CONVERSATION
SHE: What are you?
HE: I am a traveler.
SHE: Are you traveling alone?
HE: No;
SHE: How many are journeying
with you?
HE: All.
SHE: Where are we going?
HE: To a rendezvous.
SHE: With whom?
HE: DEATH.

UNRELENTING FORCE

O sea, O beauteous pounding sea,
You trash your glistening white foam
upon the rocks.

You smash your battle lines with great
force,

And sprinkle their droplets on a phalanx
strong.

But someday you will crush this foe,
(as in old, it'll yield to you).

Then as before, you will move on,
Then as before, you will move on,
To chain more land under your surging
expanse.

death at sea

as i walk along the cliffs by the sea,
and see the pounding surf come in as froth,
i often wonder what would happen,
if i happened to fall off.

to see my body crushed and beaten,
pulled away and thrown back upon the rocks;
that froth might take a different hue
from my life's last blood.

and who would find my remains
after they were so maimed ?
the angry sea pulling its prey
back out to its homey depths.

pulling me down to fathoms dreary,
lighted not by any ray,
displacing my air by means of water.
Death, o death you are here.

10-3-62

Death is but a lonely shadow,
An enemy of all who live,
One who must be fought to the bitter end,
One who will always win that awesome fight.

Life is the living of the dying,
When we stop living, we die.
There is no sense living
A life not worth dying.

Life and death,
One follows the other;
Life and death
